INTERESTING FROM EUROPE.

PER AMERICA'S MAILS.

OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

The mails by the America reached this City last evening from Boston. There is little news in addition to that already telegraphed from Halifax.

A dispatch from the Paris correspondent of the London Globe, dated the 29th ult., says:

"Some gentlemen connected with commerce have arrived here of late between Cuba and Russia. Minister calls about every day when they are in attendance at the Tuileries. The Count de Morny, who is now supposed on the part of all the Northern Powers of Europe."

The Madrid correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 30th ult., says:

"The Count de Lavalette, the Russian Envoy, has arrived in Madrid. I know not what his business may be, but I think there is little doubt that the dispute between Mexico and Spain will be settled. The Spanish troops, which left Cadiz last week, returned to that port, and this was done in a manner that the Government had always for intention; but the real reason of the return was an accident which happened to the boiler of one of the ships, the Isabel II., she having run on a rock or come in contact with a sunken wreck."

And the Paris correspondent of the same journal, writing on the 30th ult., says:

"A letter from Madrid, of the 16th, mentions that, after several conferences between M. Lersundi and the Minister of Foreign Affairs, the basis of an arrangement has been agreed to. When the convention between the two Governments is signed, M. Lersundi will remain at Madrid as Minister of the Interior."

The Madrid correspondent of the Times writes:

"Letters have been received from the French Legation, dated Tampico. They give full details of the attack upon the Mexican forces, consisting in several deaths which are to serve the Court to claim a share in the general arrangement with Mexico now impending on the part of all the Maritime

The Progress Northward of Yellow Fever.

There is a popular impression that the infection of yellow fever progresses only in a northerly direction. Persons of this sort seldom are without some basis of fact and often, if not directly true, furnish clues to important laws. We propose to examine the report made by the Physician in Chief of the Quarantine establishment with regard to the presence of the yellow fever and the origin and progress of infection at this port last Summer, to ascertain whether the facts recorded favor the supposition that danger from the infection and yellow fever is to be especially or chiefly apprehended, to the northward of the sites at which yellow fever had by any means been established, and, as to whether southerly winds are more favorable than northerly to the progress of the disease.

AT THE QUARANTINE GROUND.—The first infected vessel was examined on the 10th of June, the second on the 15th of June, and a third on the 18th June. No record is made of the direction of the wind until the 15th of June, from which until the 18th it came from the northwest. On the 18th it changed to a mild breeze from the southwest, which held to the 23d, on which day the first unimported case of yellow fever broke out at the Hospital. There were no new cases until the 14th July. On the 16th the wind changed from northwest to southwest, and so held till the 18th. On the second day of this southerly term the second and third cases were reported; the third day the fourth case, and on the 19th July the fifth case. All these were stevedores who had been engaged in removing cargo from infected vessels. From the 18th to the 21st the wind was from the northwest, and with the exception of the case last mentioned, there was no progress of the pestilence. The wind then changed to the southwest, and held at that point with remarkable steadiness for nine days, there being but one entry of northerly wind among twenty-six observations in this period. This remarkable term of southerly wind was not accompanied by any remarkable change in temperature, the mercury rising but 6¼° on an average above its mean mark of the week immediately preceding it. On the second day of this southerly wind, Dr. HARRIS observes, "This date marked an important epoch in the history of yellow fever at Quarantine. On this day the fever was announced as endemic within the Marine Hospital inclosure." (Dr. HARRIS apparently applies the word endemic to a disease when it has the quality of propagating itself within a certain locality.) During the next eight days of southerly wind there were twelve new cases.

The origin of yellow fever at this locality was, of course, in the patients brought to it from the ships. The important fact is, that these patients did not become infectious on shore except under the influence of a steady southerly wind.

ON LONG ISLAND.—(1.) The first three cases here had their origin distinctly in the bedding which had floated ashore from the quarantine ships, and which was handled by the people. The locality immediately adjoining the residence of these patients is supposed to have thus become infected.

(2.) The first certain case at the second locality of the fever on Long Island, was that of a gentleman whose residence lay at the distance of one mile east of one of the infected ships. The southerly wind had been blowing directly over her for some days before he was attacked. Two days afterwards four other persons residing a short distance to the northward were attacked, the wind still holding southerly. The southwest wind passing over the locality raked the end of the island for a distance of three miles, and in the populous district thus indicated not a single household long escaped the fever.

(3.) The origin of yellow fever at Fort Hamilton is thus stated by Dr. HARRIS:

"Fort Hamilton, by the pestilence not its fatal foal on the Fort Richmond District, a mile south of Mr. Warren's residence, and near to the fort. On that day died Gen. Swartwout, of the U. S. Army, and in his intimation was attended on an elevation which looked out directly upon the Narrows Bay, and was surrounded on the north and west by a dense grove, it was presumed when the deadly infection had been wafted to his dwelling, assistance by southerly winds which swept over the infected shipping at Gravesend."

Gen. STARRON's residence was one mile and a half where distant, due north of the Quarantine establishment, and the wind had been southerly (S. W.) at the Quarantine for a week previously. The nature of the ground is such that a northwest wind at the Quarantine was probably a south wind at Gen. STARRON's residence, "drawing round" the headland of Fort Hamilton. Dr. HARRIS continues the history of the fever:

"On the day of Gen. STARRON's death two soldiers in the Hospital were attacked with the fever, and up to day 8 twelve cases had occurred in the fort. The history of these cases was such as to convince the intelligent and distinguished physician of the garrison at Fort Hamilton, that the infection had reached that stronghold by atmospheric agency alone."

The Redoubt is the southernmost point of the Fort and nearest the quarantined fleet. The same remarks as to wind apply as in the previous case. The pestilence progressed northerly from these cases until every house was dislodged up to the locality last described as a starting point of infection.

GOVERNOR'S ISLAND.—The first case here occurred July 20. The Quarantine establishment, in which the fever was at this time raging violently, is about six miles distant in a due southeast direction, from which quarter the wind had been steady for a week previously. The fever was at the same time established, however, on the Long Island coast, four miles distant, and infected ships were anchored there five miles off, in a direction a little west of south, with no land between. Thirty-four cases of fever occurred at this generally unhealthy and very isolated post, and it is remarkable that "the victims were selected exclusively from the South Battery, which has southern and eastern exposure." The officers of the command assured Dr. HARRIS that "no assignable cause of infection was conveyed to or existed upon the island." The inference as in previously mentioned cases is, that the infection was conveyed atmospherically, by a southerly wind, across water, from a source at least four miles distant.

ON THE NEW-JERSEY COAST.—Cavan Point, immediately north of the Quarantine Hospital, is a little more than an island. It was the only inhabited point in this direction, and we believe its inhabitants were but a single family, with Summer boarders from the City, who all but one died of the fever. The origin is considered to have been infectious material from the Quarantine ships, thrown on the shore by the tide. The same is said of two cases of fever occurring near the shipping in Gravesend Bay.

STATEN ISLAND.—For a distance of four or five miles southwardly and westwardly from the Quarantine station, there is a town, or a succession of towns, more closely built and populated than any of the localities hitherto described. Yet there is not the slightest reason to suspect that a single case of fever originated here from atmospheric communication from the Hospital. In nearly all the cases the origin of the disease was directly traced to contact either with those previously sick, or with materials which had come from them.

Many of the victims were bathers, fishermen, boatmen, &c., whose occupation induced them to remain upon or in the water in the tide-way sweeping from the Quarantine ships. Of the thousands who merely passed on the water, without long delay, to leeward of the shipping, none suffered.

It should be said that Dr. HARRIS, from whose report we compile these particulars, does not himself draw any conclusion from them. He states that his object was merely to record and arrange medical facts with reference to the construction of a rational system of laws and regulations to preserve the public health.

From among the medical facts we believe we have collated by far the most significant series, and they seem to us to entitle the popular hypothesis with regard to the atmospheric conveyance of disease to be provisionally respected as a law.

We made the examination of Dr. HARRIS' Report with this hypothesis under consideration, at the suggestion of a Staten Islander, and without any expectation of the results to which it has led us. Since writing this article, our attention has been called to a paper on yellow fever prepared by the late Dr. SAMUEL R. SMITH, an eminent physician of Staten Island, and we find in it further evidence to the same effect. Writing of the yellow fever season of 1848, which carried off from 150 to 180 citizens of Staten Island, Dr. SMITH observed:

"The source of infection was undoubtedly vessels from New-Orleans (where yellow fever prevailed) riding at their ordinary anchorage opposite the Quarantine; said vessels having been employed in transporting troops among whom cases of fever prevailed. The means by which the infection was communicated were threefold. Most of the cases occurring from its commencement on the 19th of August up to the middle of September were probably communicated through the medium of the air. Easterly winds had prevailed for many days together, varying from N. E. to S. E., and blowing constantly from the ships to the shore; and only those living immediately on the shore suffered; and where a building of any kind intervened, so as to break the horizontal current of wind, those so protected escaped. Moreover, from the point where the vessels were anchored, taking the range of the prevailing winds N. E. and S. E., it would just include the infected district, which extended from the upper end of the Quarantine ground to Vanderbilt's Landing, a distance of one and a quarter miles."

"Its second mode of propagation was perhaps in a very few cases among the lightermen and boatmen, by direct intercourse with the infected vessels. Only one case can be positively proved to have arisen in this way, and this was after the vessels had been removed to Sandy Hook." The symptoms in this case were similar to the others, showing the identity of their origin.

When the infected vessels were removed, we hoped, after the lapse of a few days, that the disease would disappear; and so it did from the greater part of the infected district, but continued to linger in one small locality, extending along the shore south from the Quarantine ground about three hundred yards. Here the poison, miasmatic, telluric, or whatever its nature, had evidently obtained a foothold, and cases continued to occur until after severe frost, the last case being the 21st of October. The cause were not many, probably for want of subjects; for most of the inhabitants had fled, and the few remaining had either passed through the disease or were insusceptible to its influence."

We say that this evidence also sustains the popular hypothesis. We mean that it does so as the basis of a practical law for our circumstances, which is this, that the infection of yellow fever is chiefly to be feared from its progress with the wind which usually prevails during the dangerous season at this point from the south, and that the danger is lessened as the distance across water from an infected locality is increased; that where it becomes established on land it rapidly extends in a direction down the wind, that is northwardly, if a population is found to furnish "subjects" at frequent intervals.

More Candidates for the Credit of Independent Journalism.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I noticed by an extract in your columns of the 27th, taken from the Syracuse Journal, that the Editor of that paper, in order to sustain its character for political independence, states that previous to the assumption of his duties, he entered into a contract with the proprietor of that paper, that he should not be fettered in the expression of his political opinions while conducting its columns, thereby plainly intimating, that his predecessors had been guilty of succumbing to a political clique, and making the Journal a purely partisan paper.

As one of the former editors of the Journal, I consider such an intimation as unjust and ungenerous. The first Editor, VIVUS W. SMITH, Esq., although an ardent Whig during the days of that party, never hesitated to express his opinion on political subjects as he deemed the good of the State and nation required. The writer of this article succeeded Mr. SMITH and pursued the same course, irrespective of party interests or party behests; and the immediate predecessor of the present Editor, Mr. ANDREW SHUMAN, now of the Chicago Journal, did the same thing.

To be sure the Journal from the day of its first issue to the time the present editor assumed his duties, was a party paper as the term is generally construed, but it never blindly followed the lead of any party in all the devious shiftings and changes of politics. It advocated a creed of political principles which it considered the best calculated to promote the public interest, and was always consistent. How it has been under the management of the present editor I cannot say, but from the fact of your having a controversy with it, I judge it has been somewhat erratic.

I deem this public condemnation of the editor's unjust course towards his predecessors, as an act of justice to them. Will you therefore please publish this in your columns, and much oblige.

Yours, &c., GEORGE TEUWILLIGER.

NICARAGUAN AFFAIRS.

GEN. WALKER IN NEW-ORLEANS.

Filibusters Hostile Commences with Joy—Triumphant Reception—Walker still Confident.

From the Delta, May 28.

The telegraphic announcement that Gen. WALKER and staff had arrived at the Balize on board the Empire City, yesterday morning, created considerable excitement among our citizens. Men who had watched with intensest interest the career of the gallant young American, from the moment he set foot upon the soil of Nicaragua, and saw with alarm the cordon of fire which the chances of war and the beleaguering array of the allied States brought into being, draw closer and closer around Rivas, breathed easier when it was known that the champion of Lothrian Republicanism was safe; and even those who disliked what they conceived to be filibusterism, indulged in something of the same feeling.

Towards morning the interest became universal, and the coming of the steamer was eagerly looked for. Everybody was anxious to see the man who had linked his fame indissolubly with the history of Nicaragua, and who won an exalted name in the annals of heroic warfare when the luminous flashes of victory shot up from the streets and plazas of Rivas, Massaya and Granada.

Long before the expected arrival of the Empire City at her moorings, the extensive steamship wharf began to wear a crowded and animated aspect. The eager throng hastening from the city, including many of the companions in arms of WALKER, and our city authorities, was a goodly sight on the landing as the first glimpse of the vessel was seen several miles down the river. In quick time she came round the turn and bore up towards the wharf, firing a gun as she passed opposite Canal street. The salute from the guns of the Washington Artillery then commenced and sent its echoes over the waters, and above the din of the busy city, and to the hearts of the hero and his comrades, welcoming them as brave warriors should be welcomed, by the thundering and martial roar of cannon.

Presently the proud vessel, borne lightly on the swelling bosom of the Mississippi, and bearing a nobler freight than ever she did before, came slowly towards the wharf, while thousands of eyes were directed towards her in search of the gallant soldier on board. Three cheers were given for WALKER as the steamship closed in to her mooring, and then the multitude became hushed in eager expectation of the appearance of the General on deck. The crowd was stilled, but not quiet, for the excitement of the hundreds who were near the vessel to get on board, if possible, was intense.

Some two or three succeeded, by using not a little activity, in leaping on a ledge of the vessel and climbing on board; but the command of the Captain to prevent this mode of getting on the vessel, compelled the crowd to await the usual access. It was with considerable difficulty the gangway was put in its place, and with much greater difficulty the rush to the vessel was opposed successfully. In the meantime the cry of "WALKER" was heard, and looking aloft we beheld the unmistakable form of him whose name has become a "household word" in the South, and whose deeds have been the subject of American and European conversation, comparatively speaking, as much as any of the great captains of modern times.

Again and again he waved, his hat and bowed his head in acknowledgment of the thundering and hearty cheers that greeted them. It was a gallant sight, indeed, to see that unassuming, mild-looking, light-complexioned man, the impersonation of so glorious and daring chivalry as these latter days of ours have seen, with head uncovered, and doubtless a heart moved to its inmost core, responding, not by words, but by the eloquent language of silence and the soul-felt looks of proud consciousness, to the enthusiasm his presence excited. He, of the "blue-gray eye," the man of destiny, looked on the excited crowd with emotions, perhaps, as lofty as ever filled his brave and unconquered heart.

He had only proceeded a few paces from the gangway towards the carriage in waiting, which was thirty or forty yards off, when cries were heard to raise him, which was quickly done. On the shoulders of two gentlemen who were beside him, he was borne towards the carriage, amid the loud cheers of the assembled thousands. He was at length got to the vehicle and driven to the St. Charles Hotel, accompanied by Col. FISHER, Lieut.-Col. JACQUES, and others.

Had he come to our city as the victorious ruler of the fair land of Central America, instead of its baffled conqueror—but for a time—as sure as the stars shine out in the heavens to-night—the feelings of those who were present could not have been more inspiring or grateful. We have no doubt, had he arrived, as we trust he will one day, in the full flush of power, we should have seen more loud manifest congratulations and after-dinner manifestations, wonderfully expressive of—mean sycophancy. As it was, the intense feelings of admiration and affection showered on him with the most profuse liberality; the outspoken and rapturous words of welcome and manifestations of personal regard could only have been given to one who had secured and earned a place in the hearts of those who thronged around him. When the gang-way was got ready and WALKER came towards the landing, the rush to get near him was tremendous. The scene was almost equal to enthusiasm and love to that celebrated event, of which every one has a vivid remembrance, attending the aid of pen or pencil—the return of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE from Elba—when soldiers and officers crowded round and almost worshipped him. We were close by when he left the staging, but it was an utter impossibility to get near. We could almost imagine as he disappeared in the rushing and apparently half-crazy crowd that he was appropriated bodily by a hundred people, each of whom took as much of him as he could carry away, and treasure, as a devoted does a relic.

In due time he arrived at the St. Charles Hotel, where an immense crowd was in waiting, and who hailed him with great enthusiasm. He was brought to the balcony, from whence he addressed the people in a short and soldier-like speech, expressing the intense gratification he felt at witnessing the sympathy shown him, and of his pride in knowing that the good-will of the American people was with him. It gave assurance that the cause of Nicaragua would yet be triumphant.

After a short interval, he was again obliged to come out and address the crowd, which he did from the table of the rotunda of the Hotel. In his calm, earnest manner, and with manly eloquence, he said it was a proud consolation, after months and years of trial, to experience the approbation that was given to the cause he advocated. "It was a triumph greater than arms could ever win. With such manifestations, it was impossible that the cause of Nicaragua could fail, no matter who were its enemies; no matter how much they labored; no matter how much they willed. The enemy, he said, would yet be put beneath our feet.

From the New-Orleans Daily Times.

It was interesting to witness the imperturbable manner of him who was the receiver of all this congratulation. Standing in the middle of the room, with his hands clasped before him, he coolly surveyed each person who approached him. The General resembles closely the portraits that have been drawn of him. The features are prominent, the "blue-gray-eye" steadfast, the form little and apparently made to endure fatigue. He looks a man destined to face the boldest danger unappalled.

After the lapse of some time, during which persons were advancing and retiring, the General and the writer drew aside, and, seated together, attempted to enter into conversation; but it was in vain. People at each moment would come forward, one would attempt a speech and all would wish to say a word. A happy thought was hit on by a friend, lights were placed in the inner chamber and in a minute afterwards we were closeted alone with Gen. WALKER.

Gen. WALKER has evidently great faith in the Nicaraguan cause, and still sees victory before him. He tells us that his stay here will, in all probability, be limited to three or four days, when he will leave for other sections of the country to advance the objects for which he labors. Our interview, which lasted some fifteen minutes, was to us of the most pleasurable nature, and we parted from the General with the conviction that he possesses the calm and determined will necessary to conquer every obstacle that bests his path.

Address by General Walker on Nicaraguan Affairs.

Gen. WALKER, as will be seen by the following correspondence, was to address the citizens of New-Orleans on Saturday evening last:

Signed by D. W. ADAMS and forty others.

ST. CHARLES HOTEL, Thursday, May 28, 1857.

GENTLEMEN—In reply to your note of this date, I beg leave to say that it will afford me pleasure to comply with your wishes, and to address the citizens of New-Orleans on Saturday evening next. I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

WM. WALKER.

Messrs. D. W. ADAMS, MASON PILCHER, W. A. JOHNSON, MAUNSEL WHITE, and others.

Letter from Captain Fayssoux, Nicaraguan Navy, to General Walker.

SAN JUAN DEL SUR, Sunday, May 3, 1857.

To His Excellency William Walker, Commander-in-Chief and President of the Republic of Nicaragua:

SIR: On Wednesday, April 8, the enemy came into San Juan del Sud, numbering some 200. They fired a few shots at the schooner Granada, but with out effect. I slipped my chain and dropped out of their reach. Capt. CHARLES H. DAVIS, of the United States sloop of war St. Mary's, came on board and asked me if I would agree to a truce; if I did not, many innocent Americans might be killed, and much property destroyed. Seeing that it might be of great advantage to our cause to remain in port, if recruits should arrive, or you should wish to communicate with me, and that it was not in my power to drive them (the enemy) from the place, I agreed. Captain Davis being guarantee for both parties, faithfully observing the truce. The enemy left the same night, nothing of importance having occurred.

April 11—The enemy, about 250 strong, again returned. Lieutenant MCCORKLE, of the St. Mary's, was sent by Captain Davis to say that if fire was opened, the truce formerly entered into should be renewed, between Colonel BERRADA, commanding the enemy, and myself. The same message arrived, I consented.

April 18—At 10 A. M. I received notice that the enemy intended to take possession of the hills, and other positions commanding the schooner, and at daylight to fire upon her. I immediately dropped out of reach. In less than an hour the enemy occupied the above places. April 24—Col. GARCIA, second in command of the enemy, requested an interview, stating that he had something of importance to communicate. We met on board the St. Mary's. His object was to bribe me to turn the schooner over to the allied army. April 25—I notified Capt. DAVIS that the enemy were violating the truce by building barricades, and if he did not stop them at once I would fire upon them. He said that I must not do it. After my pointing out to him the necessity for immediate action, he went to BERRADA, who promised to discontinue them, pleading ignorance. April 27—The enemy started another barricade. I wrote to Col. C. J. MCDONALD to urge upon Capt. DAVIS the necessity for his putting an immediate stop to it or I would fire upon the town. Capt. DAVIS said to MCDONALD that he wished him to come on board, and say he would take the 1st if I fired a shot; at the same time acknowledging that it was my duty to do so. He sent First Lieutenant MAURY to ask me if I would not wait until he got an answer from Gen. MORA, to whom he had written on the subject of barricading San Juan del Sud. I replied that I would if Capt. DAVIS would then demolish all that were being built. Lieut. MAURY could not promise that. I then said that I would open fire in half an hour. Lieut. MAURY went to BERRADA and told him that if he did not cease work on them that I would fire. He stopped, and again plead ignorance. April 28—The enemy building a barricade in sight on the Transit Road. Called Capt. DAVIS attention to the fact, but there was no notice taken of it. Capt. DAVIS informed me that if Gen. MORA, in reply to his letter, said that if he (Capt. DAVIS) wished it, no more barricades should be put up, though he thought it of much importance to place the town in a state of defence.

May 2—At 4 P. M. First Lieut. MAURY came on board the schooner, and requested me to turn her over to Capt. DAVIS. I asked why I should do so. He answered that Capt. DAVIS considered it his duty to seize her if I did not give her up, as he looked upon her as included in the treaty between himself and Gen. WALKER. I refused to give her up. At the expiration of half an hour the St. Mary's broadside was brought to bear on the Granada, her guns shotted, and half of her crew at quarters, (the vessels being about 250 yards apart,) the remainder, about 100, under Lieut. MAURY, with small arms and a howitzer, boarded the schooner, showed me an order from you to turn her over to the United States. He hauled down the Nicaraguan flag and hoisted the United States flag in its place, and sent my officers and crew on shore, informing me that they were to be sent to the United States. The crew, all told, were 16. I would have insisted on Capt. DAVIS' destroying the barricades of the enemy, as from the position he occupied it was his duty to do, had he not, upon all occasions, led me to believe that he was inclined to render any assistance that I might need. He, on one occasion, agreed with me, that the schooner should never fall into the hands of the enemy. At another time, he said if the three vessels of the allies were sent to attack me he would get under weigh, run out, and show fair play. Your obdt. servant,

C. J. FAYSSOUX, Capt. N. N.

A Dreadful Murder near Westfield, Mass.

From the Springfield Republican, June 4.

We give the details, this morning, of one of the most cold blooded and even reckless murders which it has ever been our duty to record. Certain it is that western Massachusetts has not seen a parallel to this foul deed since the murder of LYONS, on the bank of Chicopee River, in Willbraham, some fifty years ago. In this instance, as in that, the murder was committed on a public thoroughfare, in a secluded spot, bordering upon a mill stream, and the object in this case as in that was plunder. We presume a fate parallel with that of HALLIGAN and DALBY awaits CHARLES JONES.

ISAAC JACKSON, a young man of only 17 or 18 years, the youngest of four brothers, Jews, who have a store at Westfield, and maintain traveling merchandize wagons, was shot and killed on the main road between Westfield and Russell, within the limits of the latter town, at about noon, on Monday. He had started from Westfield on his accustomed tour through Russell, Blandford, Chester, Becket and the towns in that vicinity, and, when about two and a half miles below the village of Russell, and only thirty rods from the residence of WM. D. MALLORY, was accosted by a man named CHAS. E. JONES. What words passed between them none but the murderer himself can now disclose. The only other circumstance happening at about this time, of which there is positive information, was the report of a pistol, heard at Mr. MALLORY's house, at about 11¾ o'clock. The road is here somewhat secluded by a mountain on one side, heavily wooded, and no one except Mr. MALLORY lives within half a mile of the spot. The theory established by later developments, is, that young JACKSON was shot on his wagon, the ball entering near the right shoulder-bone and passing out at the left breast, having gone entirely through the heart. The ballet having exhausted its force in passing through the body, did not go through the outside clothing but dropped down and was left in the garments. JONES then threw the body over the fence, got upon the wagon, and drove it past MALLORY's house, to the Blandford Road, (the junction being near MALLORY's,) which he followed for about a mile. He then led the team into a piece of woods, where he left it, and sought the residence of the late KING S. HASTINGS, in Blandford, four miles distant. He had left HASTINGS' house in the morning, and there he commenced to pass Monday night, but it appears that he left the house soon after midnight, repaired to the scene of the murder, and completed the work of secreting the body by dragging it some thirty rods to the river, and hiding it in the swift current near the shore, under two large rocks. The appearance of the trail maintains this theory, the track where the body was dragged across the road being wet by an evening rain, while that leading from the fence to the river, was plainly visible, was dry. The murderer then returned to his team, which he removed to another place, and, having changed his clothing, went down to SIMEON MALLORY'S early in the morning, to have him make some boxes for packing goods. This Mr. MALLORY lives west of WILLIAM D., and has a saw-mill. Failing to get his boxes, he went to the village, and applied to the livery-stable for a team to go to Blandford.

Nothing had been heard about the murder when JONES applied for his boxes, although WILLIAM D. MALLORY had spoken of the pistol report as a suspicious circumstance. It seems, however, that an old man named WEBSTER noticed the trail in the road, while driving his cows to pasture on Tuesday morning. He immediately reported the fact to his neighbors, and a half dozen men turned out to examine the locality. They were proceeding in their search, when HENRY K. LOONIS, who keeps the village hotel, passed on his way to Westfield, and being told the story, said he had seen a suspicious-looking man in the village, to look after whom he promptly returned. He found two men applying at his barn for a horse, as above mentioned. By this time the wagon had been discovered, and word was brought to Mr. LOONIS of the fact. He questioned JONES, who said the wagon was delivered to him the day before, by a man named BROWN, to be escorted; he acknowledged the circumstances were suspicious, but consented to ride down the river to see about the murder. NELSON D. PARKS, Justice of the Peace, also took a seat with Mr. LOONIS and JONES in the wagon. On their way down, they noticed suspicious movements on the part of their companion, and found he was holding a loaded pistol in his hand, behind his back. He surrendered his weapon with a casual remark, was further searched and appeared unconcerned, even inquiring if capital punishment had been abolished! The body was found ere they reached the spot, and soon Dr. JAMES ANDOVER, of Westfield, and a large number of men from the same place and Russell, were assembled on the spot. Dr. ANDOVER being a coroner, impanelled a jury, which viewed the corpse, and having sent it back to Westfield went themselves to Russell to hold the inquest.

CHARLES JONES, the murderer, is a native of Montpelier, Vt., and is about twenty-three or twenty-four years old. A good many years ago his father, WATSON JONES, was a stage-driver, and at one time kept a hotel at Northfield, Vt. He was dissipated, and died long since. His mother was a good and religious woman. She is now living in Montpelier; one of his sisters lives in Stafford, Ct. His brother, Dr. GEORGE JONES, was formerly a dentist in Chicopee, where he died three or four years since, and where still reside his widow and child. He had two or three sisters, and the family generally have borne an excellent name. About four years ago, JONES robbed DEAN's and other stores in Hartford. He was known there as the "ministerial burglar," dividing his time between burglary and the preaching of Millerism. For his burglaries, which were accompanied with heavy robberies, he was sent to the Connecticut State Prison for four years. His sentence expired last February.

Six or seven years ago, JONES lived with KING S. HASTINGS, a noted Millerite in Blandford. There he worked for him on a farm. He spent last Sabbath at the house of HASTINGS. In the afternoon, himself and ERASTUS, son of widow HASTINGS, went out on the farm and practiced with JONES' pistol. JONES hit the bull's-eye once, though pretending entire ignorance of the handling of the pistol. HASTINGS fired twice and loaded the arm again. They then returned to the house, and cast a lot of bullets. It is not supposed, of course, that HASTINGS had any complicity with the murder, and it is hardly probable that JONES himself knew then what use he was to make of the charge in his weapon.

JONES is described as a dark complexioned man, and hard-looking. He maintains a singularly composed and even stolid deportment, and is evidently a hardened fellow.

THE PHILADELPHIA MELODEON BURNT.—About 12½ o'clock last night fire was discovered issuing from the upper portion of the building on Chestnut street, above Sixth, immediately east of the Arcade, known as the Melodeon. The upper part of the structure was occupied as an Ethiopian opera house, under the management of MYERS & LANDIS, and the flames spread with great rapidity through the light and combustible material in this portion of the structure. The building was destroyed, no portion of it escaping the ravages of the fire except the two stores which occupied the front portion of the first floor. With this exception the entire interior, from the top to bottom, was totally destroyed. The entire loss by the fire will probably not exceed $8,000, the greater part of which is covered by insurance.—Bulletin of Wednesday.

THE BURDELL ESTATE.

Further Impeachment of Miss Augusta Cunningham's Testimony.

Evidence of Sundry Parties to Prove that Dr. Burdell was in Herkimer on the three days Previous to the Alleged Marriage.

Before A. W. Beaslay, Esq., Surrogate.

The interest exhibited by the public in this extraordinary case, seems to increase, or increase greatly. The Surrogate's Court—although hardly larger than one of the cells of the City prison—was yesterday crammed to overflowing by the curious to listen to the proceedings.

During the investigation, the Surrogate and lawyers have been much annoyed by crowds of persons staring through the windows, constituting of that class who superintend the erection of our public buildings, control our primary elections, punctually attend fires, and who may be seen on the Sabbath morning congregated at grocery stores, engaging in the pleasant and innocent pastime of a game at pitch and toss. Where are the Police? If some "intelligent officer"—no matter of which party—could be spared to prevent a recurrence of this nuisance, he would be most heartily welcomed.

The following additional testimony was presented on behalf of the heirs of Dr. Burdell:

Mrs. Mary Wilson sworn.—Examined by Mr. Tilden.—I reside at the village of Herkimer; the name of my husband is Alfred Wilson; he is a dentist in practice at that place; I am cousin of the late Dr. Burdell; I saw the Doctor in October last—on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, the 25th, 26th and 27th; I saw him on those several days at my house at Herkimer; I saw him on Saturday a little after twelve at my house; he remained there about half an hour; he called on that day two or three times; he was there again on Sunday; on Monday I saw him at our house—I think it was as late as three o'clock—perhaps later; we dined on Monday after three o'clock, and he was there at dinner; he told me he had dined and took some dessert and a cup of tea; he was there about half an hour; I fix these dates by reason of my leaving Herkimer for New-York the following Wednesday morning; I came to Albany in the cars and in the boat New World to New-York; I arrived here on Thursday at three o'clock; we went to my sister, Mrs. Williams, in Brooklyn; when I arrived there I saw her daughter, the servant and a little girl; Mrs. Williams was not in; I sent for Mrs. Williams; I had been in New-York early in the Spring of 1856, and remained until August, then again in October, as just mentioned, and not again until this Spring; I had expected to come on the 25th; I wrote to my sister, that I would be here on Tuesday morning; the little girl told me that they were disappointed at my not having arrived on that day; I saw Dr. Burdell at Herkimer on the afternoon of Monday; I had some conversation with him, as to coming to New-York on Saturday; I asked him if he would remain and accompany me, but he said he could not, as he expected to leave on Monday morning; he afterwards said that he was detained by the Court so that he could not get away on Monday; he said on Saturday or Monday that he was after some money; he mentioned no names; he said he was going to Saratoga; he said he was sorry he had been detained over, as he feared the trains would not take him directly to Saratoga; I sent a message by him to my sister that I would be here on Wednesday or Thursday morning; he said he thought I might get ready to accompany him; I was only to go with him to Schenectady; he said he had some business at Saratoga; while at Herkimer he asked me if I would not take his house in New-York; I think this conversation occurred on Sunday evening; he said he was uncomfortable and desirous of getting some other tenant in the house, and would like a friend of his; he had no conversation with my husband on the subject; Dr. Burdell said, as my husband was of the same profession he would give him an office, and that it would be very much to our advantage to take his house; he wanted us to take the house that fall; he said if we would conclude to take it he would get Mrs. Cunningham to leave, even if he had to hire her, as she had a lease; he said he had been deceived in Mrs. Cunningham.

Q.—How deceived? A.—He said she had stolen a note or notes from him.

Q.—Did he say anything more? A.—He said he had been very much deceived; that she was a very artful woman, and his great desire was to have her leave.

Q.—What else did he say? A.—He said he thought she was a very dangerous woman—she was always planning, and she told him that she had never been thwarted in her life; that whatever plans she attempted she generally carried through; but he said that she would be mistaken, for that he never would marry her and he had told her so; I had seen Mrs. Cunningham, but never conversed with her but once; this took place at my sister's, in Brooklyn; Burdell told me that Mrs. Cunningham had asked him to marry her; he had often spoken of that subject before to me; I had seen him in June at Brooklyn, and in August at Herkimer; he spoke to me about lawsuits in December in Herkimer, about the 1st of the month; I asked him the question about the lawsuit at that time; I heard that he had a lawsuit; I heard that Mrs. Cunningham had taken him for breach of promise; I asked him about that in December; he rather evaded the question, smiled, and asked me if it were not for a breach of contract; I told him no—I understood it was for breach of promise; I asked him if he ever proposed to marry Mrs. Cunningham, and he said "No," in very strong terms; I then asked him why she brought such a charge against him, did he said, "I suppose to extract money, and he said no one knew what he had suffered at the hands of that woman; nothing was said as to our coming to New-York in December, as we had given him an answer previously; he said the suits were settled; and now he should allow her to remain until May; he said nothing about going abroad in June; he did not say how the suits had been settled; he said nothing further in December as to her consent that what I have already stated; December was the last time that I saw him.

Q.—When did he speak to you in October about coming down to take his house, and what answer did you make to him? A.—I told him that I would consult with my friends and give him an answer after my arrival here.

Q.—Who were those friends? A.—My brother and sister; I think I went to church on the Sabbath when he was there, and I think he accompanied me; I did not notice his whiskers particularly, but they were short, intermixed with grey and steady; I have no recollection as to his having whiskers at the side of his face, altho' he may have had; the Doctor spoke quickly and generally loud; he was quick in his motions and erect; he carried his head straight.

Cross-examined by Judge Dean.—I remained in Brooklyn on my visit in October for four weeks.

Mr. Tilden, (interrupting.)—Q.—Are you able to fix the time when this was from any circumstance connected with your husband's coming down here—the time that you came to New-York? A.—Yes.

Q.—State what that circumstance is. A.—I wished him to accompany me, and he declined. He said he did not like to lose his vote, and it was so near election time.

Cross-examination resumed.—I stayed here until the 1st December; I left to go to Herkimer on Friday evening in company with friends; I went up in the boat, and arrived in Herkimer about half past ten the next morning; I expected the Doctor to go, but he did not; he arrived there on Saturday, at six o'clock in the afternoon; he remained until the succeeding Monday morning; I think he came to collect rents; he had some property there; he rented a house opposite our house; I don't know the amount, but it was small; I saw the man pay him a quarter's rent; I don't think it was $100 a year rent; he spoke of raising money on some notes; I saw him in December about 6 o'clock in the evening, and he spent part of the evening with us; I saw him again on Sunday about eight, and he accompanied some friends and my husband to Church, but I did not go; I saw him at 10 o'clock on Sunday evening; my husband was present; he did not join in the conversation as to Mrs. Cunningham, as he did not know her; never spoke to my husband on the subject of marrying Mrs. Cunningham; some of us were in favor of it about a year ago; I never heard any opposition upon their part; Miss Dennis Hubbard, his cousin, said that she was distrous that the Doctor should marry Mrs. Cunningham.

Q.—When was Dennis Hubbard living at this time? A.—With Mrs. Cunningham.

Q.—Was that before or after Dennis obtained the divorce from her husband? A.—After; it was soon after Mrs. Cunningham commenced housekeeping; I heard of this in Brooklyn.

Q.—Was she present? A.—No one.

Q.—Dennis told you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you assent or dissent to it? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Were you surprised to hear it? A.—Yes—of his thinking of marrying.

Q.—Did you tell the Doctor what Dennis said? A.—No; I don't think I told my sister.

Q.—How did Mrs. Williams come to say there was anything talked about the Doctor's marrying. A.—I do not know, Sir.

Q.—What were the rumors that she said she had heard about it? A.—I do not know.

Q.—Can you recollect what was said? A.—No.

Q.—She mentioned the subject? A.—I heard her speak of Mrs. Cunningham, but, as to the subject of marriage between her and the Doctor, I have no recollection of her saying anything about it?

Q.—What other members of his family have you heard speak about it? A.—Not any; I know Mrs. Bulen, but have never talked with her upon the subject of the marriage; I think I asked her if she had ever seen Mrs. Cunningham, and she said, I think, that she had seen her in Third street, but had no acquaintance with her; Mr. Bulen did not visit there, quaintance with her; Mr. Bulen did not visit there, quaintance with her; Mr. Bulen did not visit there, there was some difference between him and the Doctor; I first heard her name mentioned in Herkimer a year; I first heard her name mentioned in Herkimer a year ago last New-Year's; I heard she was boarding in the same house with the Doctor; I spoke to the Doctor about her in the Spring in New-York; I did not then know that they had been two Summers to Saratoga together; the Doctor first mentioned her name to me; he said she was a very pleasant woman, and spoke very well of her.

Q.—Did he not speak very highly of her? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he tell you that she was a rich

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The European mails by the steamer America [illegible] this City from Boston last evening. With [illegible] to the Spanish-African dispute, the precise [illegible] of affairs seems to be thus: a basis of an ar[illegible] had been agreed upon between the [illegible] and the Spanish Minister for [illegible]. The Dutch Government has re[illegible] one vessel of war to swell the [illegible] demonstration against China, and it is said [illegible] collisions between Russia and China [illegible] the former a pretext for claiming a share in the general settlement. Particulars are given of the failure of M. CHARLES THURNEYSSEN, Banker of Paris, to the extent of a million sterling. This stoppage is attributed to the speculating mania that is raging just now in the French capital. M. THURNEYSSEN is supposed to have sailed in the Arabia for the United States, and it is said that his protection will be applied for under the Extradition Treaty between this country and France. [illegible] correspondent, whose letter is published elsewhere, gives an interesting summary of English news for the week ending the 23d ult.

In reference to the denial by Lord NAPIER of the report that New-Granada had ceded an island to Great Britain, the Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun writes as follows: "Lord NAPIER, who has charge of all movements, diplomatic and naval, which concern the British Government in Central America, has informed the Government that there is no foundation for the report that New-Granada had ceded an island to England."

Advices from the City of Mexico to the 16th ult. have been received. The report of the execution of Gen. GARZA and his party was confirmed. The Presidential election had taken place, and returns received were favorable to the reelection of Comonfort.

The American National Council, in session at Louisville, concluded their business on Wednesday night, and adjourned sine die. The old officers of the Council were generally reelected, and the Philadelphia platform of principles was reaffirmed, after striking out the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth resolutions, relating to the Territorial Administration.

The inauguration of Governor HASLE, of New-Hampshire, took place yesterday. A brief summary of the points of his inaugural address will be found under the Telegraphic head.

We publish this morning, from the New-Orleans papers, details of the arrival and reception in New-Orleans of Gen. WALKER. The desistance of that gallant city appear to have been thrown into the most intense spasms of excitement on the occasion. Gen. WALKER was to deliver an address to them on last Saturday evening. A letter from Captain FAUNTLEROY to WALKER, detailing his operations on board the schooner Granada, will also be found in our columns this morning.

The Burdell investigation was resumed yesterday, when several witnesses were produced on behalf of the heirs to impeach the testimony of Miss AMELIA CUNNINGHAM in relation to the Doctor being in the City a few days previous to his marriage.

Mr. DUNCAN declines to answer the Excise Commissioners' late inquiries, on the ground that their office is not enumerated in the list, which by law, he is made to have a legal care over and to counsel.

Mr. MORTON, City Inspector, consulted counsel yesterday as to the extent of his power to clean the streets under the new act, since the refusal of the Common Council to authorize him to proceed with the work. Alderman COOMBS, of the Second Ward, has a number of men at work cleaning the [illegible] portion of his Ward on his individual responsibility.

At the Board of Councilmen on Thursday, a lengthy opinion was received and read from Mr. ROBINSON, Corporation Counsel, to the effect that he does not believe in the legality of the demand on the part of Gas Companies for the use of a meter. He illustrates by supposing the Croton Department to attempt a charge for the use of their instruments of admeasurement. An exceedingly dull discussion followed in an unsuccessful effort to defeat a contractor who sought an additional hundred days for the completion of a sewer on Murray Hill.

The [illegible] stone of the new Third-avenue Railroad Depot was laid yesterday, amidst speeches, [illegible] and drinking. The depot (corner of Third-avenue and Sixty-fifth-street) is to cost $210,000.

Owing to the fact that the notices calling the [illegible] of the New-York Academy of Medicine were but partially distributed to the members, and for which Mr. BOYD (the Express man) was called to an account by the President, a small number were assembled on Wednesday evening, and most of the usual business of the meeting was deferred. Still some seven or eight persons, being a strong addition to the "German element" of the Society, were elected members. Dr. BARNET's (late Drug Inspector for the port of New-York) communication was in some measure discussed, notwithstanding the expressed unwillingness of many to enter into political matters.

Yesterday Judge MITCHELL granted an order to show cause why AUGUSTUS PARDY, one of the English Railroad defrauders, should not be discharged from arrest. The order was made returnable on Saturday at 10 o'clock.

A Bonded Warehouse in Brooklyn was destroyed by fire yesterday, with a loss of $150,000, of which scarcely more than $50,000 was covered by insurance.

An adjourned meeting of the Councilmen's Committee on Streets was held yesterday, in reference to the proposed widening of Hanson-street. A number of property owners were present, and several of them expressed their views. That the property owners might have time to mature their opinions, the Committee adjourned to Thursday in next week, the 11th instant, at 2 o'clock.

The United States steam-frigate Minnesota, on her late trip from Philadelphia to Norfolk, attained a speed of nine knots with a head wind and sea, the engine working satisfactorily.

The United States ship Jamestown, which has lately arrived at Philadelphia from the Coast of Africa, is to be thoroughly overhauled during the Summer.

Yesterday, Mr. JONAS B. PHILLIPS, President of the Board of Councilmen, informed Mr. FLAGG's Secretary that he should commence a suit to-day against the keeper of the City money bags, for the month's pay due him as Councilman. Mr. FLAGG, not at all daunted by the prospect of another legal contest, and relying on the "opinion" of his legal adviser, the Corporation Counsel, has directed that the money be retained his salaries and see what it [illegible]

The New-York Choir Regatta came off yesterday in the finest possible style. The Jetta, Una and Edgar took the regular prizes—the Widgeon taking the schooner prize.

The fleet and force detached by the Quarantine and Police Commissioners made a successful landing at Seguine's Point yesterday, meeting no other opposition than a speech from a delegation of the native. Going down the bay, the line in the hold of the schooner took fire; the schooner had to be beached at Stapleton, the stuff unloaded, and the lumber reloaded again: after which, all went happily.

The Chamber of Commerce had an interesting meeting yesterday. The Committee on the Port Wardens bill reported that WM. ALLEN BUTLER and CHAS. O'CONOR, Esqrs., had given their written opinions that the bill was unconstitutional, illegal and invalid. Another Committee reported hard things of Harbor-masters generally, and urged all good citizens henceforth to aid in fetching them to justice when guilty. Another Committee hopes the Commissioners of Pilots will enforce the Port Regulations—but don't recommend the Chamber to guarantee them any money.

There were interesting scenes at the Eleventh and Thirteenth Ward Police Stations last evening. Capt. SQUIRES made his appearance in the former just before roll-call, and stated to Capt. CROWE that he (SQUIRES) had an order which he wished to read to the men. Capt. CROWE would not permit any order to be read by an "outsider," whereupon Capt. SQUIRES retired. The men of the Second Platoon were then called upon to declare themselves, whereupon eight men expressed a preference for the new Commissioners. These eight then surrendered their emblems and repaired with Capt. SQUIRES to a new Station-house in Sixth-street. In the Thirteenth Ward also, several men declared themselves last evening for the new Commissioners. Speeches were made on the occasion by the two Lieutenants. Eleven more insubordinate Captains were dismissed yesterday by the White-street Commissioners.

J. W. MCALPINE, who has figured in the police reports so often during the past year, is again in trouble, and in the Tombs, this time on a charge of subornation of perjury.

The body of a drug clerk named GREEN, who *has been missing for some time, was found yester*day in the river at Pier No. 22.

Two boatmen amused themselves last night by a prize fight on an up-town pier. They battered each other badly, but the sport was brought to a sudden stop by a squad of policemen. The principals, seconds and bottle-holders made good their escape in boats.

At Dr. CHEEVER's church, last night, a very exciting meeting was held. The report of the committee appointed to propose amendments to the standing rules of the church was, after a bitter debate, adopted. The election of officers for the ensuing year then took place, and the meeting had not adjourned at midnight.

The Brooklyn Board of Health having declared for the new Police Commissioners by a pertinent resolution yesterday, Mayor POWELL refused to sit with them.

National Sports and their Uses.

When some much-tormented victim of spiritual afflictions asked MARTIN LUTHER what prophylactic was likely to prove most effectual against the assaults of the devil, the great-hearted Reformer answered him that he knew no better assurance against the inroads of the Evil One than a capital supper and a bottle of good Rhine wine. In the sound good-sense of this celebrated reply lurks a complete system of practical morality worthy the grave attention of all people, and particularly of the "universal Yankee nation." The unbalanced despotism of the intellect is the sorest social curse under which we labor in the United States. Sports of all kinds, and especially the hearty athletic sports which develop the body with the brain, and bring forward the sharp, quick, active qualities of what may be called the physical mind in an equal degree with the subtler faculties of ratiocination, have never been encouraged among us as they should have been. Our muscular nature rarely gets a fair chance in our life. We exist by and for the nerves; and it is no fanciful theory which attributes the sudden excesses and equally sudden relapses of political feeling the partisan intolerance and the coquetish impatience of our public life, in no small degree to the want among us of national games and pastimes, mainly joyous and earnest.

We are continually told that the European races are degenerating physically on this Continent, and no longer ago than last Summer an elaborate paper was read before the British Association at Cheltenham, in England, to prove that at no distant day the Anglo-American and Hispano-American races in the New World must utterly disappear by their own default, and give place, in all human probability, to a mighty Republic of pig-tailed Chinamen! The paper was written seriously and seriously discussed, and not a few facts of somewhat portentous significance were adduced to support its position.

Absurd as such notions are, there is very good reason, however, for believing that the standard of physical vigor in the older regions of this country is by no means equal to that standard as it exists in the newer States of the Far West, or the more genial nations of Europe. While the average wealth of the individual in New-York, for instance, exceeds considerably the average wealth of the individual in London, the average length of human life, which is the only tolerably safe test that can be applied to determine the sanitary condition of a people, is decidedly greater in London than in New-York. That is, the average citizen of the American Metropolis, with more ample means of subsistence at his command, enjoys less of the priceless boon of health than the average citizen of the British capital. It is easily possible, of course, to find a hundred plausible suppositions which may serve to account for this surprising and very unsatisfactory truth. But there can be no reasonable doubt that one very prominent and efficient cause of this difference between ourselves and our Transatlantic kinsmen. In respect of physical developement, is to be found in the greater prevalence throughout England of a taste for all manner of manly and athletic exercises. While the coarser and more brutal amusements of bull and bear baiting, or of dog and cock-fighting, have gradually disappeared before the advancing spirit of the age, (since the death of the late Lord Byron, the present chief of the Tory Churchmen, the Earl of Derby, is, we believe, the only conspicuous representative left in England of the aristocratic patrons of the cock-pit,) the manlier and invigorating sports of the field and the out-door hunting, sailing, pedestrianing and wrestling—have been in exactly an the increase. The young Englishman who begins his education in athletic sports and pastimes, through the trying ordeal of foot ball at Eton or Rugby, graduates on the heath at a sixteen-hand thorough bred, or on the deck of a sailing schooner. Englishmen of all ranks share according to their degrees and opportunities in the exhilarating and healthful influences of these national tastes—and the pleasure of the few ensures, in a thousand different ways, to the profit of the many.

To reproduce the tastes and habits of English sporting life in this country is neither possible nor desirable. But to develope analogous tendencies of an original and specific character appropriate to our national trials and our national opportunities is both very possible and very desirable. And therefore it is that we hail with the warmest sympathy every successful instance of an attempt to interest our community in healthful and pleasurable pursuits extraneous to the business of their ordinary life.

Such an attempt is the institution by the New-York Yacht Club of an annual Regatta, the prizes for which are to be contended for by vessels which are the private property and the private delectation of individual citizens, sensible enough to love the sea and its exciting amusements, and rich enough to gratify their commendable tastes. This institution has rapidly assumed proportions which entitle it to national consideration. Special privileges have been accorded to the vessels which compose the Yacht Squadron by the Secretary of the Navy, and these privileges have contributed to make the graceful models designed for marine amateurs familar to the practical builders of the whole country.

The waters adjacent to the harbor of New-York are peculiarly favorable to yachting as a sport. They offer quite sufficient opportunity for the exercise of considerable seamanship, while they are safe enough to take from the sport that character of positive peril which belongs to the Icelandic and Norse voyages of the English yachter. The Englishman in his yacht has a boy's predilection for the most ticklish possible fun. He rejoices to share a maelstrom—to fight a nor'wester all night in disagreeable proximity to a lee-shore; and to entangle himself in Fiords out of which nothing short of a special Providence or a steam-tug can extricate him. We have seen an English yacht which had been lying in the Bay of Naples for weeks during pleasant sailing weather, suddenly put out to sea at the first symptoms along the horizon beyond Capri of one of these tremendous squalls which so often make the navigation from Amalfi to the capital a very serious joke.

The American idea of yachting is much more agreeable, and certainly not less profitable. We regard the yacht as a pleasurable thing in itself, and as susceptible of large national uses. The gentlemen who have built the best boats of our New-York squadron have a right to read, with peculiar pride, the glowing tribute to the splendid qualities of the steam-frigate Niagara, which we extract, today, into our columns, from the London Times; for the lamented GEORGE STEARNS, to whose genius, as a naval architect, our marine is mainly indebted for its present unquestionable superiority, made his first mark as a builder of yachts for our Club. Had the institution borne no other fruit than this, it would be worthy of the high place in the public esteem and interest which it has conquered. But we look for still further services to the maritime and naval world from this quarter. We have no wish to interfere with the private arrangements of a Society which, although so valuable to the public weal, is still a strictly private body. But we think the members of the Club will do well to consider whether they may not make themselves still more extensively useful to the interests which they have at heart, by establishing a system of prizes for the encouragement of ship-building of a strictly mercantile character. Our pilot boats, for instance, deserve the attention of such a body, and we have no doubt that an annual pilot-boat race, under the auspices of the Club, would not only prove to be a most interesting occasion in itself, but by tending still further to popularize the growing interest in our seagoing ships and seafaring men, do a great deal also to further the ends of general good which ought to be connected with every legitimate development of national sports. Precedents for such a proceeding are not wanting, if precedents be needed. The Agricultural Societies of several States have for years been in the habit of offering double sets of prizes to their own members first—and then to all the seafaring world at large, and this example might certainly be acted upon by the Yacht Club with the best possible results.

Our Yellow Fever Fortifications.

In another part of this paper will be found an analysis of a valuable Report of the Quarantine physician, made with a view to discover if the facts recorded at all sustain the popular theory that danger of Yellow Fever infection is peculiarly great to the Northward only of localities already overtaken by it.

If there is the least plausibility in this theory, and no one will be disposed to make light of it, we think, after reading the evidence we have thus presented, it will be a matter of surprise to none of our readers that a state of feeling should exist among the people of Staten Island of a nature that will render it very difficult to establish and maintain, even temporarily, an effectual Lazaretto at Seguine's Point.

The ground upon which the buildings are to be placed is low: a few hundred yards to the Northwestward is a large marsh; across this marsh and a low country it is but a mile distant to the village of Lemon Creek: the main road of the Island passes through this village to Tottenville, a thriving village about two miles distant. The population of Tottenville is about one thousand, and the road thither is completely lined the whole distance with cottages, seldom more than a hundred yards apart, which are occupied chiefly by the families of the oyster-men. From Tottenville two steamboats ply daily to the City. The masted oyster craft trading with New-York, and all dependent on Prince's Bay, number from two to three hundred.

Northwardly, from Seguine's Point, it is one mile to the church in Bloomingview, whence runs a stage-coach daily with passengers for New-York by the east side ferries. A mile further North is the church and hamlet of Woodrow, and a mile further, or at three miles North of the hospital, will be the town of Rossville, from which there are daily four stages to a hundred and fifty [illegible] New-York. Also [illegible] a half circle of a radius of three [illegible] from Seguine's Point, our [illegible] seven churches and not far from a thousand dwelling-houses.

So much for the land vicinity. The anchorage ground which is reported to have been selected, bears southeast from the Point, and will be distant a mile and a half. It stretches, at about this distance, in a line parallel with the shore for three miles, occupying the whole channel entrance to Princes' Bay, Raritan River and Canal, and the Sound back of Staten Island. The flood tide draws from it directly in a strong current right upon the shore at the very point most frequented by the oystermen. The South wind blowing over it will take the most beautiful part of Staten Island for the whole width of three miles.

The tide, as well as the wind, will sweep directly across the principal oyster beds, and if the oystermen, who have not far from a million dollars involved in the matter, are allowed to pursue their avocation at all, they will be precisely in the track of the boats plying between the infected ships and the infected Hospital.

It is is their custom to dredge and tong their beds chiefly at night, and to run to market at New-York before daylight. There are from two to three hundred masted craft and an innumerable fleet of small boats thus occupied at the very worst period of the usual yellow-fever season.

Whether the Commission propose to destroy this business, or to allow it to be carried on under these circumstances, their design must be thought equally inhuman and impracticable.

In view of the facts we have stated there can be little doubt that, in a season only equally favorable with the last to the infection, the adjacent district would be, in a very short time, completely desolated by yellow fever, after it had become endemic at the proposed hospital at the Point. From each of the villages we have mentioned there is a dense resident population on several roads towards New-York, and the communication from the district is of a nature that it would be impossible to interrupt. In fact, the danger of the fever's reaching New-York City appears to us much greater from a Quarantine establishment at Seguine's Point than from that at present occupied. From the latter the southerly wind rakes no habitable land for a distance of many miles. From Seguine's Point it would sweep the densest part of Staten Island, and that on a course directly towards New-York.

WHO IS TO PAY THE MUNICIPAL POLICE? A small sentence in the recent Police act seems to have escaped the attention of the Municipal Solons and of those legal gentlemen who are suing certain obsolete sections in the Dongan charter to establish a day and night watch. Section 26, after providing that the moneys collected in 1856 and 1857 for purposes of police and those sums apportioned for succeeding years, closes with these words: "The said several sums of money apportioned, levied and collected within each of the said cities of New-York and Brooklyn shall be in lieu of all taxes within each of the said cities for the support of police government therein." The ordinary revenues of the City not being sufficient to pay its expenses, the Supervisors have to resort to the Legislature for permission to levy the additional taxes, but according to the preceding words, the levy for police, whether small or great, in the City of New-York, goes to the Metropolitan police and excludes all else. The next Board of Supervisors, it must be remembered, will consist of twelve persons, distinct from the Aldermen elected, six by general ticket, and six appointed by the Mayor from the next highest candidates. The minority on this police question will be equally represented with the majority in that Board, and whether it will back up the Treasury for the day and night watch is highly problematical.

TROUBLES IN DR. CHEEVER'S CHURCH.

Adoption of the Report of the Committee appointed to amend the Standing Rules of the Church—Election of Officers, &c.

In accordance with previous announcement, the annual business meeting of the Church of the Puritans (Dr. CHEEVER's) was held last night.

The meeting was opened with singing and prayer, after which Dr. CHEEVER stated that the present was the annual meeting of the Church, and the first step to be taken was the election of a Chairman. He also stated that he had occasion to be absent for a time, but would shortly return.

Rev. G. J. WARREN was nominated as Chairman, and after the question had been put, a division was called for, and it was found that eight only were opposed.

Mr. THEODORE WARREN was then nominated as Clerk, but he declined, saying that he was too young a man for the office, when so many more competent were present.

Mr. E. W. KING was then nominated, when

Gen. MATHER said it was usual in deliberative bodies for action to be taken when a member declined to accept office, and he therefore moved that Mr. WARREN be excused. The motion was carried, and Mr. KING was unanimously elected.

The Chairman announced that this was the annual meeting of the Church for the choice of officers, and the transaction of such other business as properly came before it.

Gen. MATHER supposed that they had a programme marked out in the rules, and referred the Chairman to rule six, which prescribed that the records of the last annual meeting should be read.

The records of the last annual meeting were called for, but they were not in the house.

Mr. HAVENS supposed the first thing in order then would be the presentation of reports.

Gen. MATHER supposed not. He believed in abiding by the rules, and by reference to rule 6, it would be seen that the next business in order was the revision of the catalogue of members.

Mr. FEY replied that there was no specified order of business in the rules and asked that the report of the Committee appointed to revise the standing rules of the Church be then heard.

Gen. MATHER did not understand what it meant, if, in this free country and in this Christian Church—supposed to be composed of free men and good Christians—such an utter disregard should be paid to rule and order. To act in that matter was not creditable to them as an associated body capable of self-government. He advised them to act like men and treat matters fairly—to treat them as a worldly man was required to treat his ordinary business, with fairness and honesty.

Mr. FEY called the gentleman to order.

Gen. MATHER asked the gentleman to state his point of order.

Mr. FEY stated he had reflected upon the honesty of the members.

Gen. MATHER—I take it back, because honesty and fairness—

SEVERAL VOICES—"Order, order."

THE CHAIRMAN—The brother is clearly out of order.

Gen. MATHER said he had a right to speak, and he should maintain his rights in spite of the hindering and opposition he met with. He contended that the revision of the catalogue of members was the next business in order.

The Chairman intimated that the worthy Gen. was not speaking to the question, and said although [illegible] Gen. MATHER offered as an amendment to the motion of his youthful friend, (Mr. FEY,) that they now proceed to revise the catalogue of members.

Mr. FEY called Mr. MATHER to order. He had been called a youth by the gentleman, and he had been called a youth, too, by one of the daily papers, but he could always act manfully, and he was old enough to act with discretion.

Gen. MATHER begged to apologize; but he wished it to be understood that this rule of revising the catalogue was introduced was prescribed for the purpose of ascertaining who were entitled to vote.

The CHAIRMAN—Have you reduced your amendment to writing?

Gen. MATHER—No, Sir.

The CHAIRMAN—I would like to have it in writing.

Gen. MATHER—I would like to know if my friend has reduced his motion to writing?

The Chairman was of opinion that the amendment of Gen. MATHER was not on the subject of the motion, and, therefore, was not in order. Mr. HAVENS's motion was to call up the report of the Committee, while the amendment was to call up the catalogue of members for revision.

Gen. MATHER—How are we going to have anything to guide us in taking a vote, if we slide by the rules of the Church?

Mr. HUNT—I call the gentleman to order. The Chairman has decided the amendment out of order.

Gen. MATHER—Allow me to say that it comes strictly within the order of proceedings, as laid down in the standing rules of the Church.

The CHAIRMAN—I still rule that the original motion is in order, and that for the reasons already stated—the amendment is not.

Mr. MATHER—I call on the Chair—

Mr. ARNOTT—(interrupting)—Permit me to remark to the members of this Church, that the New-York Herald said, a few days since, that we were preparing for a grand row to-night, and it is beginning to look like—

Cries of "Order, order."

Gen. MATHER—I object to any action upon that resolution. The fourteenth rule prescribes that "no resolution shall be adopted at the same meeting at which it is offered, if any objection is made thereto," and I wish my objection noted.

Mr. FEY—I have a motion to make.

The CHAIRMAN—It is perfectly proper for the meeting to call upon a committee appointed at a previous meeting to make their report; it is perfectly proper for this Committee to make their report.

Cries of "Question, question."

Mr. HAVENS—Is not that question open to discussion?

The CHAIRMAN—It would have been, had not the President commenced to put the question.

Mr. HAVENS (emphatically)—The question has not been put. Is it open for discussion?

The CHAIRMAN—The question would have been put, had not the brother interrupted me.

Mr. HAVENS (with renewed emphasis)—Is not the question open for discussion?

The CHAIRMAN—I suppose it is.

Mr. HAVENS—Then I hope we shall proceed and not have the gag rule applied.

THE CHAIRMAN—The gag law shall not be applied.

Mr. HAVENS then called for the reading of the resolution, and inquired to what Committee it related.

The Chairman did not suppose that more than one Committee had been appointed to revise the rules.

Mr. HAVENS thought it was no matter for suppositions.

The Chairman said as there had been only one Committee appointed, consequently there could be but one report.

Mr. FEY amended his resolution by inserting the words "the Committee appointed on Tuesday, the 26th ult."

Mr. HAVENS then objected to the report on the ground that the meeting on that day was not a legal one, and recited the rule of the Church on calling meetings, saying it had not been complied with.

Mr. E. W. KING stated that the call for the meeting had not been placed in the hands of the Clerk of the Church because he was absent from the City at the time, but that a copy had been given to Dr. CHEEVER to read from the pulpit.

A very long debate followed, characterized by personalities and bitterness. After the question was put, the Committee made the following report:

The Committee to whom was referred the subject of amending the Standing Rules of the Church of the Puritans, respectfully report:

That they have looked carefully at these rules, as they have existed for some years. They find a small number of these in need of amendments, not of great importance, but yet such as the convenient transaction of business seems to require. Indeed the proposed amendments do little more than conform the rules to the practice of the Church.

The only rule of great importance, whether considered on general principles, or with reference to the present necessities of the Church, is the one from which a life tenure is inferred in the Deaconship.

Such a tenure implies rule within the representation. This is not in happy accordance with the fundamental constitution of Congregationalism. According to this all the power of the Church resides in the body. Whoever is appointed to perform any service, acts by authority of the body, and as its representative. He is a delegated power, in the exercise of which he is responsible to his constituents.

The evil of a life-tenure, or a tenure which can be terminated only by a direct vote of displacement—always delicate, and usually regarded as a hostile act—is that the deacons of the church often come to feel themselves a distinct order, having an authority beyond the functions of their office, a right to lead the opinion and the action of the church, and to expect a deference on account of their official position. In the infirmities of our nature this tendency is unavoidable.

Another and cognate evil is, that deacons, though they may represent the sentiment and will of the church when appointed, may come to cultivate to represent the sentiment and wishes of the present.

The changes in our cities of the membership of a church are rapid, and deacons come to be in a very few years the representatives of a past generation. When a large proportion of the present members have had no voice in their election, they are likely to look upon them as official persons, and not as representatives of the church in living sympathy with its pulsations.

It is of importance to accustom as large a number of members as practicable to the discharge of the duties belonging to the deaconship. The proportion of those fitted for such duties will depend much on the demand for them, and the demand will be increased by the necessity of periodical changes.

Your Committee deem it wise to render deacons ineligible for one year after their term expires. If eligible, a reflection will be expected, and if not accorded, the omission will be regarded as a censure. The same persons must be continued for fear of wounding feelings, when a change would be expedient. These are reasons which induce your Committee, on general principles, to advise a short term of office and ineligibility.

But there are considerations which render it specially important to apply these principles in this Church at the present time. And your Committee deem it the part of Christian frankness to declare, without disguise, yet in all courtesy, the reasons why they believe what is fit and wise at all times as to this office, is of imperative necessity in this Church and at this time.

It is well known that our deacons, without invoking the advice or consulting the wishes of the Church, have attempted to drive its pastor to a resignation. The letter addressed to him by these and others has been laid before the Church, and through the press, has become known to the community. It is irregular, partisan and unjust to the Church. Two, at least, of the deacons are generally understood to have been active in getting this up and in procuring signatures. The Church cannot safely confide in men, as its representatives, who thus act, of their own will, and without the voice of the Church, or even calling for an open expression of its wishes, to sunder the ties of pastor and people.

But aside from the impropriety of the proceeding in its very nature, there are objections to it at this time of gravest import.

In the midst of abounding treason against God and humanity, of silent consenting, or of striking hands with the oppressor, there are ministers in this City who stand up unflinching in the power of truth and the Gospel. All honor to such. Their outspoken words shall go down to future ages. They are doing their part to redeem the nation from error and falsehood and wickedness and shame. They know too well that this redemption will never come from political parties without a holier fire in the heart than can be caught from the fitful torch-light of expediency. To these political parties present success is everything. Not so with those who proclaim to the understanding and the heart the great truths of righteousness. They know that these truths belong to God and are lasting as his throne. They fight a battle with a certainty of victory, though a thousand fall at their side and ten thousand at their right hand.

Among the champions of right against wrong—of the oppressed against the oppressor, of christian principle against selfish cupidity, the pastor of this church has taken a prominent stand. Here on Union-square, in the heart of the City, he has fought the battle against Slavery, its abettors and apologists, with a brave heart. With powers of logic and illustration rarely matched, raised up by God to do a work for the nation, for mankind, and for the age, he has sent his thunder tones from the Atlantic to the Pacific—from our northern to our southern border, calling men to be true to themselves and to their God—holding up to scorn, contempt and loathing the principles and sentiments which brand our nation with infamy and make it a reproach among all people. His tones have reverberated beyond the Atlantic, stirring the best blood of the heart, wherever that heart is true to freedom.

God has honored the pulpit of this Church by making it a great watch-tower for the nation. Its occupants have a duty to perform before the world. All eyes turn to us to learn whether we will be faithful to our trust. It is ours to shield, to sustain and to encourage the man whom we have placed in this pulpit. Shall we, out of a fractious determination of our will, in the stubbiness of our hearts, from not God nor regard man—have for our pastor to speak for right, for truth, for equity? Are we so lost, so nearly savage as to take counsel of our fears?

Dr. CHEEVER is pastor of this church; and he is [illegible] His mission extends beyond the walls and [illegible] of Union-square. He is a prophet, [illegible] our pulpit.

[illegible] Gen. MATHER offered as an amendment to the motion of his youthful friend, (Mr. FEY,) that they now proceed to revise the catalogue of members.

Mr. FEY called Mr. MATHER to order. He had been called a youth by the gentleman, and he had been called a youth, too, by one of the daily papers, but he could always act manfully, and he was old enough to act with discretion.

Gen. MATHER begged to apologize; but he wished it to be understood that this rule of revising the catalogue was introduced was prescribed for the purpose of ascertaining who were entitled to vote.

The CHAIRMAN—Have you reduced your amendment to writing?

Gen. MATHER—No, Sir.

The CHAIRMAN—I would like to have it in writing.

Gen. MATHER—I would like to know if my friend has reduced his motion to writing?

The Chairman was of opinion that the amendment of Gen. MATHER was not on the subject of the motion, and, therefore, was not in order. Mr. HAVENS's motion was to call up the report of the Committee, while the amendment was to call up the catalogue of members for revision.

Gen. MATHER—How are we going to have anything to guide us in taking a vote, if we slide by the rules of the Chair?

Mr. HUNT—I call the gentleman to order. The Chairman has decided the amendment out of order.

Gen. MATHER—Allow me to say that it comes strictly within the order of proceedings, as laid down in the standing rules of the Church.

The CHAIRMAN—I still rule that the original motion is in order, and that for the reasons already stated—the amendment is not.

Mr. MATHER—I call on the Chair—

Mr. ARNOTT—(interrupting)—Permit me to remark to the members of this Church, that the New-York Herald said, a few days since, that we were preparing for a grand row to-night, and it is beginning to look like—

Cries of "Order, order."

Gen. MATHER—I object to any action upon that resolution. The fourteenth rule prescribes that "no resolution shall be adopted at the same meeting at which it is offered, if any objection is made thereto," and I wish my objection noted.

Mr. FEY—I have a motion to make.

The CHAIRMAN—It is perfectly proper for the meeting to call upon a committee appointed at a previous meeting to make their report; it is perfectly proper for this Committee to make their report.

Cries of "Question, question."

Mr. HAVENS—Is not that question open to discussion?

The CHAIRMAN—It would have been, had not the President commenced to put the question.

Mr. HAVENS (emphatically)—The question has not been put. Is it open for discussion?

The CHAIRMAN—The question would have been put, had not the brother interrupted me.

Mr. HAVENS (with renewed emphasis)—Is not the question open for discussion?

The CHAIRMAN—I suppose it is.

Mr. HAVENS—Then I hope we shall proceed and not have the gag rule applied.

THE CHAIRMAN—The gag law shall not be applied.

Mr. HAVENS then called for the reading of the resolution, and inquired to what Committee it related.

The Chairman did not suppose that more than one Committee had been appointed to revise the rules.

Mr. HAVENS thought it was no matter for suppositions.

The Chairman said as there had been only one Committee appointed, consequently there could be but one report.

Mr. FEY amended his resolution by inserting the words "the Committee appointed on Tuesday, the 26th ult."

Mr. HAVENS then objected to the report on the ground that the meeting on that day was not a legal one, and recited the rule of the Church on calling meetings, saying it had not been complied with.

Mr. E. W. KING stated that the call for the meeting had not been placed in the hands of the Clerk of the Church because he was absent from the City at the time, but that a copy had been given to Dr. CHEEVER to read from the pulpit.

A very long debate followed, characterized by personalities and bitterness. After the question was put, the Committee made the following report:

The Committee to whom was referred the subject of amending the Standing Rules of the Church of the Puritans, respectfully report:

That they have looked carefully at these rules, as they have existed for some years. They find a small number of these in need of amendments, not of great importance, but yet such as the convenient transaction of business seems to require. Indeed the proposed amendments do little more than conform the rules to the practice of the Church.

The only rule of great importance, whether considered on general principles, or with reference to the present necessities of the Church, is the one from which a life tenure is inferred in the Deaconship.

Such a tenure implies rule within the representation. This is not in happy accordance with the fundamental constitution of Congregationalism. According to this all the power of the Church resides in the body. Whoever is appointed to perform any service, acts by authority of the body, and as its representative. He is a delegated power, in the exercise of which he is responsible to his constituents.

The evil of a life-tenure, or a tenure which can be terminated only by a direct vote of displacement—always delicate, and usually regarded as a hostile act—is that the deacons of the church often come to feel themselves a distinct order, having an authority beyond the functions of their office, a right to lead the opinion and the action of the church, and to expect a deference on account of their official position. In the infirmities of our nature this tendency is unavoidable.

Another and cognate evil is, that deacons, though they may represent the sentiment and will of the church when appointed, may come to cultivate to represent the sentiment and wishes of the present.

The changes in our cities of the membership of a church are rapid, and deacons come to be in a very few years the representatives of a past generation. Dr. CHEEVER is pastor of this church; and he is [illegible] His mission extends beyond the walls and [illegible] of Union-square. He is a prophet, [illegible] our pulpit.

Nothing but a "yachting" morning, in the most literal sense of the term, in our times. The day, in respect of atmosphere, was all that could have been desired. Warm, yet not sultry, the air was refreshing, and the sunshine was sufficiently agreeable to the occupants of the exhilarating but pretty overcrowded deck, the usual of all things proclaimed, if not a "hunting," certainly a "yachting" morning, with which no reasonable mortal could find fault.

Those who remembered the gusty and drizzling day which unkindly June last year set apart for us, could not but feel a thrill of gratitude to the gracious month for its altered mood. Many of the ladies, in particular, who had been fortifying their minds by the previous perusal of carefully prepared works on "Sea-sickness," or occupied in purveying for themselves the small and subtle prophylactic globules devised by the Homœopathic chemists against the assaults of that [illegible] fun, must have sent up secret and silent ejaculations of delight as they gazed down from the somewhat picturesque pier at the foot of [illegible] street over the smooth and glassy surface of the already crowded Bay.

The sincere and growing interest which is felt in the noble sport of yachting by our citizens was [illegible] indicated, let us say en passant, by the unusually large and unusually elegant assemblage of queens of beauty who delighted this year to honor the regatta with their presence and their smiles. The association of the better to the worser half of creation on board the Club steamer is always such as very seriously to tax the powers of entertainments of the members who avail themselves of their privilege. Every man is called upon to multiply himself indefinitely, and to make himself as agreeable as a single gentleman in a sensing state without at the single disadvantage of prestige. Fancy, too, the difficulty of keeping the minds of twelve or fourteen invalids, or, rather, babies so constantly and so pleasantly occupied that they shall have no time to think of the tricks which the disreputable old ocean is playing with the centre of gravity, and you will understand that the jolly yachting man who sails on a Regatta Day has a much less exciting and exhausting duty to perform than the yachting man who steams.

This year the Club, as we have said, doubled the duty upon the shoulders of every gallant adventurer who boarded the Fox.

Alongside of the steamer chartered for the Club lay the John Sligo, which had been procured by the Regatta Committee for the accommodation of "outsiders," admitted on application to the Committee. This vessel, too, was crowded, as were two others which accompanied the flotilla, one of them rejoicing in a magnificent new pennant, with the inscription "Union." Add to these steamers and their living freight, a vast number of "impressible" boats, yachts, pilot-boats, pleasure-boats, and craft of all sorts, all equally packed with human beings—line the piers of the lower part of the City and of Jersey City with multitudinous and vociferous citizens—throng the shores of Staten Island, the Bay Ridge on Long Island, and the ground about Fort Hamilton with carriages and pedestrians—and you will form some notion of the vastly-increased interest which was this year manifested in the Regatta by our people. Many of the ships at our wharves were gaily dressed—flags flew from the Long Island hotels—from the Fort Hamilton—from the Pavilion and from Mr. Astor's house on Staten Island—in fact from all manner of places conspicuous and inconspicuous—and a salute was fired from the station of the Club at Jersey City. Gotham itself does not present a more animated, though it may sometimes boast a more gorgeous and crowded spectacle than the annual bearing British Queen comes over from Cowes to "visit Salamander" upon her yachting tour. In the early August weather, South a Bay—with a panorama of City and rural shores—of stately towns, and hurrying steamers shimmering in and out of scattered islands and stately heights—shining in an splendid an expanse of glittering waters Cowes certainly never can present. Sub Jove never then the contending yachts were arrayed as splendidly as the gallant of the philanthropic, filibustering Emmet for that celebrated regatta which Vivian did so well—and which terminated in so disastrous a style. It would be hard to imagine a prettier sight, or one more calculated to kindle a flush of national exultation in the heart of an American, than that which was offered by the waters around the Club-boat which was moored out off the yacht Club house at Hoboken. There they lay, swaying to the tug, impatient and restless the tug, staunch, cunningly devised sea witches that have led the van of our century in their last few years of wonderful progress and development. The crew scarcely relinquished the notion that the creatures had a life in them of their own, and were impatient for the encounter. At least this was the opinion of the ladies, who always indulge in the figurative and the amiably hyperbolical. The cables were removed, and the growing faith in the sidewheel rig was ridiculed pretty plainly along the line. This faith has been fostered by the Regatta Committee, Messrs. Haswell, Wainright and Cook, and a prize was made up a short while since for a schooner prize, to be adjudged in this day's race.

The yachts started well at 11:30, with a fair breeze from the northwest, not by any means strong enough for the large vessels, and affording much less promise than one could have wished of a really exciting race. They had the last of the ebb with them, and ran down in good style, laying their course all the way, without tacking at all, and passed to the west of the Staten Island stake boat in the following order:

| | Tonnage. | Speed of Canvas. | H. | M. | S. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lucky | 15.6 | 1,515.18 | 11 | 45 | — |
| Una | 67.8 | 3,051.91 | 11 | 45 | 30 |
| Julia | 69.16 | 3,008.18 | 11 | 47 | 00 |
| Vesta | 97.09 | 3,072.46 | 11 | 49 | 15 |
| Mischief | 49.8 | 3,248.52 | 11 | 49 | 05 |
| Madge | 49.2 | 3,778.17 | 11 | 50 | 30 |
| Julia | 69.4 | 3,097.85 | 11 | 51 | 50 |
| Hero | 67.32 | 3,996.11 | 11 | 54 | 5 |
| Favorite | 105 | 3,103.55 | 11 | 55 | 27 |
| Wave | 100.4 | ——— | 11 | 56 | 35 |
| Undine | 64.15 | ——— | 11 | 56 | 50 |
| Widgeon | 101.9 | 3,412.60 | 12 | 8 | — |
| Scud | 49.7 | 3,142.14 | 12 | — | 45 |

They passed then to the East of the Long Island stake boat, the Lucky leading.

| | H. | M. | S. | | H. | M. | S. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lucky | 12 | 27 | | Hero | 12 | 5 | |
| Una | 11 | 30 | | Favorite | 12 | 7 | 15 |
| Mischief | 12 | | | Wave | 12 | 7 | 30 |
| Julia | 12 | 3 | 30 | | | | |

Having sailed to the Southwest Spit the wind lulled for a moment, but they took the young flood, and having round from the westward came up with a reviving breeze—the wind at least three points free, may stack the boom, having coasted to the South and westward. They turned the Southwest Spit in the following order:

| | H. | M. | S. | | H. | M. | S. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Richmond | 1 | 1 | | Margaret | 1 | 7 | 54 |
| Edgar | 1 | 1 | 30 | Island Fawn | 1 | 8 | 30 |
| Una | 1 | 9 | | Escort | 1 | 9 | 38 |
| Minnie | 1 | 9 | 5 | Widgeon | 1 | 11 | 10 |
| Julia | 1 | 15 | | Rowena | 1 | 13 | 50 |
| Hero | 1 | 15 | | America | 1 | 14 | 35 |
| Lucky | 1 | 5 | 5 | Undine | 1 | 15 | 15 |
| Madge | 1 | 6 | 45 | Sea Drift | 1 | 20 | 5 |
| Lucky | 1 | 7 | 5 | | | | |

On the whole, the race, though by no means of the "crazing" or ecstatic kind, was one of the most interesting over witnessed in our waters. The third observation had a fair chance with the wind—and it is worth noting that, in running down to the first stake-boat—which, however, she did not time—the pilot boat J. S. Hellen (No. 91) kept well with the Hero. Two other pilot boats, however, (No. 1 and No. 65,) did not make quite so good a figure.

The prizes, which were made by Tiffany & Co., are of the substantial dinner service order, and are more likely to keep alive the recollections of the day's sport and triumph, over well-laded mahoganys, than the gigantic, utterly impracticable and indescribable pitcher carried off by the America from our Transatlantic brethren.

And so ended a very pleasant day, memorable in the lighter annals of our New-York marine, and not to be wholly overlooked by the more serious historians of those that go down to the sea in ships.

Board of Governors.—The Board of Governors and of the Almshouse met at the Penitentiary on Tuesday.

Several communications, having relation to the routine business of the institutions, were received and read.

Commissioner Anderson offered a preamble and resolution to the effect that the children of the Primary Department of Randall's Island, having been removed by the resolution of the Board passed April 14, and being now deprived of a common school education, they not having access to the necessary instruction, that the Commissioner of Emigrants' Island be requested to place them in the Grammar School.

After some discussion the resolution was adopted by the Board. Commissioner Anderson then offered the following resolution, which was also adopted:

The Law and Finance Committee, having reported in favor of the Board of Governors of the Almshouse

The principal merit which I claim for myself in this report is that of having noted the whole configuration of the country; and my chief object has been to represent the tribes with whom I came in contact in connect in their historical and ethnographical relation to the rest of mankind, as well as their physical relation to that tract of country in which they live. If in this respect I have succeeded in placing before the eyes of the public a new and enlarged picture, and connected these apparently savage and degraded tribes more intimately with the history of races placed on a higher level of civilization, I shall be amply recompensed for the toils and dangers I have gone through.

FINANCIAL.

PITTSBURGH, FORT WAYNE AND CHICAGO RAILROAD COMPANY.

MORTGAGE BONDS CONVERTIBLE.
$3,500,000 FOR CONSTRUCTION. $6,500,000 FOR REDEMPTION OF FUNDED DEBT.

Date, January 1, 1857. Principal payable January 1, 1887.

Interest at seven per cent., payable July 1 and January 1.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN NEW-YORK.

To provide means for the immediate completion and full equipment of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad of 468 miles, as well as to make timely provision for the redemption of the Funded Debt of the Ohio and Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, and Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Companies respectively, maturing at different periods between Sept. 1, 1854, and July 1, 1873, the PITTSBURGH, FORT WAYNE AND CHICAGO RAILROAD COMPANY, into which these three Companies were legally merged by consolidation August 1, 1856, has authorized the issue of TEN THOUSAND BONDS, of which 3,500 of $1,000 each are known as Construction Bonds, and 6,500 of $1,000 each are known as Redemption Bonds, and are of the tenor above stated.

These Bonds are secured by a MORTGAGE IN TRUST to JOHN FERGUSON and THOMAS E. WALKER of New-York, covering the Company's Road of 468 miles, from Pittsburgh to Chicago, with all its Depots, Franchises, appurtenances and franchises, embracing the Railroad Bridge over the Allegheny River at Pittsburgh, and Depot grounds of great value in Pittsburgh, Allegheny, Chicago, Fort Wayne and at other points.

The Mortgage provides for a sinking fund.

The Redemption Bonds will remain under the control of the Trustees, and be issued only from time to time, as they can be exchanged for, or are required to be sold to redeem the outstanding Bonds of the three Companies consolidated, and the privilege of such exchange is now extended to holders of these Bonds, and their attention is especially invited to the advantages that will result alike to the Consolidated Company and themselves by such exchange.

The Construction Bonds are offered for sale to provide means to finish the Road between Plymouth and Chicago, 83 miles, and to ballast it and equip and furnish it with a full stock of Rolling Machinery, Engine-Houses, Shops, Station-Houses, &c., the estimates for all of which are nearly $6,000,000.

The Capital Stock of the Company is fixed at...$16,000,000
The present cost of the Road is about.....12,000,000
The paid Capital is nearly.....4,000,000
The Funded debt secured on the Road is.....6,666,000

The earnings of the Road, mainly from local traffic, since the consolidation, from the 1st of August, 1856, to the 1st of May, 1857, eight months, have been over $1,200,000. The net earnings for this time are at rate of over 7 per cent. on the entire cost of the Road. They are the earnings of an unfinished and but partially ballasted and equipped road.

The earnings for 1857 are estimated at $2,000,000.

The Road is operated for 352 miles, from Pittsburg to Plymouth, Indiana, where its business passes to and from Chicago over another more circuitous route of different gauge.

The 83 miles between Plymouth and Chicago are in progress of construction, and far advanced toward completion. Four thousand tons of American iron are purchased, 40 miles of track can be laid this season, and the whole work completed to Chicago within twelve months; after which the earnings will then stand as it believed, with the development of the business of the road, to a permanent income of $4,000,000 per annum.

The guaranties of this result are believed to exist in these facts:

1. The road has immense resources for local traffic in passengers and freights. It connects by the shortest line Pittsburg and Chicago, and passes through 24 counties and 15 county towns, (including the terminal,) the valuation of whose property for taxable purposes in 1856 exceeded $150,000,000—the counties embracing some of those the best developed and most productive in Ohio and Indiana, and the towns being among the most important centres of trade between Pittsburg and Chicago.

2. The road has connections over 15 lateral railway connections, bringing it in communication with the whole Western Railroad system—these connections conferring great advantages to the road as a route over various and large portions of its line from Chicago to Toledo, Cleveland and Buffalo, and from Pittsburg to Indianapolis, St. Louis, Cincinnati, &c. A reference to a map will more fully illustrate this point.

3. The Road is a single line, without branches, and the longest CONTINUOUS Railroad in the United States, and for its whole length of 468 miles, part of a great central route, in connection with the Pennsylvania Railroad, of 318 miles from Philadelphia to Chicago, and of 906 miles from New-York to Chicago, via Philadelphia, and on completion of the Allentown Road in Pennsylvania, of 888 miles only from New-York to Chicago, thus saving from 180 to 72 miles in distance via Philadelphia, and from 75 to 98 miles via Allentown, as compared with the great routes through New-York—making also the shortest route of 796 miles via Harrisburg, between Baltimore and Chicago. In alignment and grades the entire line from Chicago to Philadelphia has marked advantages, no grades existing between Chicago and Philadelphia, going East, over 52 feet per mile. Between Pittsburg and Chicago no grades exceeding 42 feet per mile, and for 336 miles there are no grades exceeding 26 feet per mile, and for more than that distance the route is practically a straight line. The Road, therefore, must become one of the most important, if not the most important, PERMANENT avenues of American commerce, and its traffic will be limited only by its capacity.

4. The Road will be completed at a low cost, as compared with other leading through lines, and has corresponding advantages in grade, alignment, &c., for safe, speedy and economical operation, and easy and cheap maintenance.

A full Exhibit of the history, condition and prospects of this Road, with copies of the Bonds, Mortgages, Articles of Consolidation, &c., has been prepared and will be furnished for the information of parties desiring to invest in the Bonds.

The Company solicits a full investigation of the merits of this loan. It is offered as one in every respect worthy the attention of capitalists, and applications are now invited for the Construction Bonds, $150,000 of which have already been sold.

A subscription for $1,000,000 of the Construction Bonds, conditional on the amount being taken, with the option to subscribers of taking $6,000,000 at the same rate, is open at the office of the Company, No. 37 William-st. (3d floor,) where all needful information will be furnished.

Dismissal of Insubordinate Candidates

A New Station-House for Capt. Squires, of the Eleventh Ward.

THE TEST PUT IN THE THIRTEENTH WARD.

Secret Meeting of the Old Board.

The great turn-out of nearly the entire Fifth Ward Police in favor of the new law, was yesterday the great topic of conversation in police circles about the City Hall and in White street. Those in favor of the new order of things, were made more sanguine, and the wavering more confident, especially as it was pretty well understood that the Police of the other Wards would follow the example set in the Fifth, as soon as the proper accommodations were arraigned for their reception.

Everything passed off quietly in the Fifth Ward on Wednesday night; and yesterday, one of the detailed force of that Ward—Dockmaster Moneypenny—reported himself to Sergeant Hutchings, at the station house in Duane-street, as did also Mr. Mundy, of the two-dockmasters.

The Mayor, on being informed of the state of affairs in the Fifth Ward, gave notice to the detailed men from that district to return and report themselves for duty to Captain Horrigan. Nearly all of them complied. Last night five men from the Twentieth and five from the Twenty-First Ward were detailed for patrol duty in the Fifth Ward. The force of the new Commissioners were also sent out on street duty so that the Fifth Ward had never so large a patrol force.

Yesterday morning also notices were served upon nearly the entire detailed force at the Chief's Office and elsewhere to report themselves forthwith—some to the office in White Street and some to their Captains for patrol duty. Among the latter was Joseph Keefe, one of the Chief's Aids.

The Metropolitan Police Commissioners met yesterday morning. Mr. Draper, the President, was absent. The seven Captains tried the previous day for insubordination were all dismissed. Mr. Bowlen voted against dismissal in every case, except in that of Capt. Toomey, who declared in a letter to the General Superintendent that he could not be induced to serve under the new Commissioners, nor do anything else that would cast a stain upon his honor or injure his standing in the Democratic Party.

No other business was done by the Commissioners.

The old Commissioners met yesterday afternoon with locked doors. The Clerks were all busily at work in their shirt sleeves, filling up blanks and directing notes and orders, the contents of which were still from the newspapers. It was understood, however, that the Mayor will to-day make a clean sweep of every man in the Department known to favor by word or act the new Commissioners, and that all the vacancies will be instantly filled with new men.

The great event of yesterday in this contest was an emeute among the Eleventh Ward Police force, and also among those of the Thirteenth. Capt. Squires, lately dismissed by Mayor Wood, having rented the commodious apartment in Sixth-street, near Avenue C, for police purposes, called last evening before roll-call, at the old station in Union Market. He informed Mr. Croft, Mayor Wood's new Captain, that he had come to speak to the men, and to read them an order.

"You shall do neither one nor other," answered Capt. Croft, decisively.

A dialogue then ensued between the captains about as follows:

SQUIRES—But, Sir, I have orders to read to the men and I will and shall do it.

CROFT—I tell you, Sir, you shall not. If you have any orders from the Commissioners leave them here, and either myself or the Lieutenant will read them to the men. You have no right here, Sir,—no right to send orders to my men, and I repeat you shall not.

SQUIRES—But I will read the order, Sir, and speak to them too.

CROFT—Attempt it, Sir. If you do I shall order you out, and if you refuse to go I will put you out, Sir. You must not come here to harangue and incite my men.

SQUIRES—I have no such intention, Sir, I merely wish to—

CROFT—It matters not to me, Sir, what you wish. I am Captain here, and shall be, too. Now, do not compel me to resort to force to eject you.

SQUIRES—Beware, Sir, how you lay your hands on me!

CROFT—I will take the responsibility and abide the consequences. I want no further discussion. If you attempt to address my men or read any orders I shall chuck you down stairs!

SQUIRES—Oh, you cannot alarm me; I am not afraid of your threats. But, (hesitatingly,) I want no difficulty of such a nature with you. I shall speak to the men below.

Mr. Squires then retired. In a moment thereafter the roll was called, and the platoon came forward. After the names of the men had been called, Capt. Croft informed them of the visit of "a Captain" Squires, and said that it was as well to learn how many were in favor of the Albany Commissioners. All those in the platoon that were so inclined would step forward, and surrender their stars and caps, which were municipal property, and their buttons also, as speedily as possible.

Seven men, thereupon, stepped from the ranks, and, after delivering up their stars and caps, left for the new Station house in company with Captain Squires, who had stood, during this time, at the door below stairs. The ranks of the seceders were increased, soon after, by one man from the first platoon, who were out on duty, and who had not been called upon to declare themselves.

At 8¾ o'clock the roll was called at the new Station-house. The following persons answered:

Sergeant Legget, Sergeant Smith. Privates—Abbott, Lake, Crum, Willis, Wells, Laffin and Lyons.

Lieutenant Cameron, who was dismissed by Mayor Wood about the same time with Captain Squires, was also present. So that, at present, the force of Metropolitan Police in the Ward consists of eleven men, including the officers. This force will be increased, to-day, by others from the old station. The men were at once put on duty—four were sent on patrol and four detained in the house as a reserve to relieve at 12 o'clock.

Messrs. Leggett and Smith were Sergeants when Capt. Squires was deposed by the Mayor, but were reduced to the ranks, because they had expressed sympathy with the old Captain. Mr. Abbott, whose name is mentioned above, was made a Sergeant by Capt. Croft, but of course Capt. Squires did not recognize the legality of such an appointment. Capt. McKinney, of the Thirteenth Ward, having been dismissed yesterday, by the new Commissioners, it was determined to take a test vote of the men, at the hour of evening roll-call. Accordingly, at that hour the two platoons were marched in, and the roll called. There were one or two absentees. All the superior officers were present. Lieut. O'Keefe then addressed the men as follows:

"You have been called together, gentlemen, in consequence of the complicate state of affairs in our Police organization at present. An act has lately been passed by the Legislature of this State which has created a new set of Police Commissioners, and the Constitutionality of the said law even the Judges have disagreed upon. It is now, therefore, a matter of consequence that we should now see who among us will sustain the new Commissioners or the old ones. I this day received a notice from Mr. Tallmadge, ordering me to report myself at the office of the so-called Police Commissioners in White street; this is the first official notice I have taken of this matter and it will be the last. I am anxious to treat all parties with proper respect, but if by recognizing the new Board, I am placed in such a position as to turn my back upon the old, I must certainly decline. The roll will be now again called, and those who are in favor of the old Commissioners will please answer "New-York," those who are for the others will answer "Albany."

Officer THORN requested to see the order, but Mr. O'KEEFE refused, stating it was simply an order appointing him a Sergeant. Captain McKENNY said that he had this day been dismissed from his situation by a Board which he had never seen, and he therefore wished to see how far his authority would be recognized.

Second Lieutenant SERRACH also addressed the men as follows:

GENTLEMEN: The state of things in our Station house is becoming very disagreeable. We are all aware that we have two parties in here; one party willing to stick as heretofore to the only existing legal authority of our Police Department. His Honor the Mayor, Fernando Wood, the Commissioners with whom he is associated, and to our Chief of Police George W. Matsell, Esq.; and the other party, who recognize the "so-called" new Commissioners from Albany.

—Officer THORN—(interrupting)—You'd better go and study law, I think.

Mr. LEBACH—Silence! I am still your officer.

Officer THORN—You are, are you.

Mr. LEBACH—(continuing)—The impudence of this so called new Commissioners, went so far as to discuss our Captain this afternoon from the position he holds now as Captain of this District, because he has faithfully discharged his duty in obeying the orders of his superiors, by whom he was appointed.

It will be a mutual relief to us all, to end this unpleasant condition we are placed in, and I shall, therefore, after roll-call, with the full consent of our Captain, and my brother officer, Lieut. O'Keefe, take a test vote, so as to ascertain how we actually stand. Every man who recognizes the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge, and the Chief of Police, as the only existing heads of our Police Department, and Captain McKinney as our Captain, will please answer Old, and every man who does not recognize the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge as the only existing authority, and Captain McKinney as our Captain, will please answer New.

If there should be any amongst you who would not be willing to answer at all, and not open and manly show his color, he will be marked down as doubtful, so that everybody knows the double faced man.

Officer THORN—Where do you get your orders from?

Mr. Lubach did not design an answer, and then called the roll, with the following result:

Old Commissioners—Sergeants O'Connor, Vanwart, Melio, Barnsfield and Eigeman, and Officers Elliott, Williams, Bingham, Daly, Morgan, Smith, Zeiger, Strock, Gerah, Reilly, Conklin, Nevins, Halleck, Post, Mitchell, Benswanger, Drinker, Carroll, Calhoun, McManus, Nelson, Flood, Johnson, Jenkins, Kirk, Firehook, Ward, Eisseman, Abbott and Carpenter.

New Commissioners—Sergeant Connell. Officers Acker, Vantassell, Parrish, Bedell, Thorne and Osborne.

Officer THORN then said he should no longer recognize Capt. W. King, whereupon the Captain suspended him.

Mr. O'KEEFE asked if Mr. Thorn recognized him, to which he answered in the affirmative, when Mr O'Keefe demanded his star, which he refused to give up; but subsequently Sergt. Cowell and Officer Vantassel gave theirs up.

The detailed officers of the Ward volunteered for patrol duty, but were not required.

When Sergt. O'Conner's name was called, he answered "Old," and said he wanted the Marines and United States Troops out to protect the City.

Others said they should obey the law of the State and no other, consequently they declared for the Metropolitan Board.

The men shortly after went on patrol duty, and although a large crowd was around there was no excitement, and all passed off peacefully.

FORGERY.—ISADORE RUDOLPH, aged 19 years, was arrested Wednesday by Officer TITUS, of the Reserve Corps, and brought before Justice OSBORNE for forgery. The prisoner, it was shown, was in the employ, as clerk, of Messrs. SCHMIDT & MULLER, manufacturers of ladies' dress goods in John-street, and that he had the filling out of that firm's checks, which were afterwards signed by the firm. He was then intrusted with the presentation of the checks, many of which he altered, and obtained sums of money ranging from fifty cents to ten dollars. He always returned to his employers the amount for which the checks had been originally drawn, and kept the surplus for his own use. The forgeries were discovered on Saturday last, when the checks were returned by the bank to Messrs. SCHMIDT & MULLER. RUDOLPH admitted his guilt. He stated that he was born in Prussia, and was a clerk by occupation. Justice OSBORNE committed him for trial, in default of $1,000 bail.

A VERY SERIOUS QUESTION.

Can old and long standing secondary syphilis ever be cured? Must those who have been imprudent in their youth, forever pay the penality of their folly, and transmit it from generation to generation? Is there no through, complete and perfect remedy? Answer—There is but one that may implicitly be depended upon. There are others that may or may not cure. Some alteratives are resorted to in the belief that the change they will produce may in time eradicate the malady. But, to insure a certain, unmistakable, effective eradication of the elements itself, of the disease itself, the only thing is ANDERS' LIQUID IODINE, or PURE IODINE WATER. It never fails. It makes you as good as ever. It restores you to perfect health and removes every taint whatever from the system. It is sold at $1 a bottle, by ANDERS & FOSDICK, No. 3 Second-avenue and No. 862 Broadway; G. H. RISO, No. 192 Broadway; BARNES & PARK, Nos. 304 Broadway; Mrs. HAYES, Brooklyn; and all druggists.

LONG ISLAND.

Burning of a Bonded Warehouse—Loss $150,000.

At one o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire broke out in building No. 5 of Baxter's Stores, on Furman-street, at the foot of Clark street—a bonded warehouse—and the building, with most of its contents, was destroyed.

There was in the building at the time property valued, as we learn from Mr. BAXTER, at $150,000, belonging to MOSES TAYLOR, LEAGRAFT & Co., and others, New York merchants, the whole of which is covered by insurance.

The principal loss is 1,100 hogsheads of sugar and molasses, which was insured in the following offices: Fulton, $5,000; Security, $10,000; Clinton, $10,000; Manhattan, $15,000; Indemnity, $10,000, and a large amount in the London and Liverpool, and other New-York offices, belonging to the "Association," the names of which were scrupulously concealed.

The insurance in the Security we understand was effected less than two hours before the fire broke out.

The building covered several lots, and was one-story high, built of brick, and belonged to the estate of E. J. SANFORD, and was valued at $12,000. Insured for $6,000.

The origin of the fire is not known, but it supposed to have been accidental. The fire was first discovered in a bale of hay; and Mr. VANDERVEER, one of the Assistant Engineers of the Fire Department, says that he could have prevented the destruction of the building and contents, if a person in charge had not stopped him from removing the hay on fire, who supposed that it could be put out with a few buckets of water.

The firemen turned out promptly and aided materially in saving adjoining property, as did, also, a boat sent by the Union Ferry Company, which played a large stream upon the fire from the river.

THURSDAY, June 4—P. M.

The America's mails reached this City, this afternoon, from Boston. They furnish Liverpool advices to May 23, with London and Paris dates to May 22. We do not find in them any matter of special interest, not previously mentioned in the summary of the news received by telegraph from Halifax.

BENSON & Co., of London, write, under date May 22, of the money, stock and general markets, thus:

"Although money has been in less demand both for discounts and loans during the past week, the improved tone of feeling to which we alluded in our last circular has scarcely been maintained. The diminished stringency arises rather from a temporary pause in the demand for money, than from a removal of those causes which have hitherto given rise to it, and the lessened confidence above referred to, originated from a belief that these causes are still in operation, and that we cannot look for any immediate or early relaxation, but must wait for the operation of an abundant harvest in this country, and a good silk crop in the south of Europe. The contingencies to which we must for some time be subject in respect of these, in conjunction with the continued unfavorable state of the exchanges with the East, a large failure on the Paris Bourse and the report of a new contract for purchase of specie in the Bank of France, are the immediate causes of the less buoyant tone of feeling. The rate of discount remains unchanged, on the Stock Exchange. Money is a little easier. In our last Circular we quoted Consols at 93⅞@94 for money, and 94⅛@94⅜ for the 4th of June. To-day the quotations are 93⅞@93⅞ for money, and 93⅞@93⅞ for the account; and English Securities generally are rather lower. In the American Market confidence has been somewhat shaken by the failure of the Great Western of Illinois and Lake Erie, Wabash and St. Louis Railroad Companies to meet the interest on their Bonds, and by the refusal of the City of Albany to recognize their liability on the Bonds issued to the Northern Albany Railroad, without, however, having much effect upon the prices of the better class of American Railroad Bonds and Shares. The transactions during the week have comprised: Michigan Central Railroad Bonds of 1869 at 91¼; Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana at 72, 71¾, and 71; New-York Central 6 ₱ cents at 89; 7 ₱ cents at 94; Erie Third Mortgage at 35; Ohio and Pennsylvania Income Bonds at 69¾ and 69¾; Pennsylvania First Mortgage at 90; Illinois Central 7 ₱ cent. Construction Bonds at 99, 99¾, and 99; Freelands at 108; and the Shares of this Company at 31, 30, 30¾ and 30¾ premium. There have been a few transactions in United States 6 ₱ cents, which are in demand at 106¾, but there is scarcely anything doing in State Stocks.

"The Manchester market is exceedingly dull and weak for both Goods and Yarns, although there is no material alteration in quotations. The short time movement is occupying much attention, and several spinners and manufacturers have curtailed the hours of work in their mills. The sales of Cotton at Liverpool will amount to about 34,000 bales, with an inanimate market and moderate demand. Holders, however, do not press sales, and quotations remain without material alteration.

"Our Corn Markets have fluctuated a little during the week, but close without much difference in price. Mark-Lane quotations are—Wheat, choice American White, 66s.@68s.; Red, 60s.@61s. ₱ quarter; Flour, best brands, 32s. ₱ barrel; Indian Corn, select and pure White, 38s.; Yellow, 36s.@37s. ₱ 480 lb.

"Rails are hardly so firm in price. Our quotations are: £7@£7 5s. for cash, and £7 10s. six month's credit.

SATTERTHWAITE, writing on the same day, refers to money matters and American Securities, thus:

"Since our advices of the 15th instant, we have to note a very dull feeling on the Stock Exchange. Money has been in quick demand, at rates varying from 6 to 4 ₱ cent. on call, and the tendency of prices has been downward. Consols close dull at 93⅞ to ⅝ for Money, and 93⅞ to ⅝ for Account. There has not been much activity in London in American Securities during the past week. We note, however, considerable activity in Illinois Central Shares, at prices ranging from 139¾ to 140, closing sellers at 140. Freeland Bonds have changed hands, at 108¾ and 108. In other descriptions there has been very little doing."

The Bankers and Board of Brokers were largely represented at the Regatta to-day. Partly in consequence of this and the quiet and easy feeling in Money affairs, the Street was rather dull to-day. A fair amount of business was done on the Stock Exchange, and the sales well distributed throughout the list. The Bulls were in the ascendant in Erie at the close, while the Bears gained ground on Southern Michigan, and to a partial extent in Reading and New-York Central. The Western Road list, generally, was weaker. La Crosse fell to 75¾ and Milwaukee to 64 ₱ cent. Illinois Central was an exception, leaving off 139¾ cash. The decline in Michigan Southern was most prominent, contracts being pressed at the afternoon Board at 53 ₱ cent. as against 55 ₱ cent. at the opening of the early session. The rise in Erie was 1⅝ ₱ cent., the stock closing 37¾ cash. The sellers were not disposed to press contracts, and some of them were buyers of the cash stock between Boards. The private sale of 1,400 shares noted yesterday we now understand to have been made at 37⅝ per cent., not 39 or 40 as rumored. The general market closed steady. In Foreign Bills there was nothing done. The next packet a the Columbia, of the Collins' line, for Liverpool on Saturday. The Sub-Treasury disbursed to-day $229,558 against $79,004 received. The present balance is $12,611,367.

The second installment on the Michigan Southern Guaranteed subscription is due to-morrow, June 5, at the office No. 18 William-street.

The most cheering accounts of the Western Grain crops are being received within a few days past, and these particularly apply to the States of Ohio and Illinois. The southern counties of the last named States, now brought within convenient distance of the Lake ports by the Illinois Central, will soon have new Wheat in the Chicago market. The favorable look of the new crops is influencing more or less the sending forward of the old stocks of grain from every quarter.

Mr. GEORGE M. GRIGGS, of GRIGGS & LOTHROP, No. 35 Wall-street, was to-day admitted to membership at the Stock Exchange.

Thompson's Reporter quotes Land Warrants as follows:

| Buying Prices. | | Selling Prices. | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 40 acres | $1 07 | 40 acres | $1 12½ |
| 80 acres | 92 | 80 acres | 96 |
| 120 acres | 87 | 120 acres | 91 |
| 160 acres | 92 | 160 acres | 96 |

The Herald as a Bear.

From the New-York Herald, June 3, 1857.

MICHIGAN SOUTHERN opened at 55¾, and closed at 53 per cent. There were very large transactions in each stock. Every one was anxious to get out first, and it crush to sell run down prices rapidly. The immediate cause of the panic in Michigan Southern stock to day was the fact that the new members and the old members of the board of Directors are at loggerheads, and refuse to meet for the transaction of business. The Gray party and the Litchfield party are at issue, and we are a little curious to see which party will be kicked out. It is our impression that the Litchfield grip on the concern is too strong to be loosened. The new party is completely disgusted with the condition of the Company's affairs, and most of them have sold out their entire line of stock. Now the only thing left for them to give us all the facts of the case, or resign. If they remain, without exposing the whole concern, without giving to the public all the facts, all the figures—without showing where all the money has gone, and for what purposes—they will be equally culpable with the old set, and be judged accordingly. There is only one course for them to pursue, and that is to make a clear and comprehensive expose of all the corruptions, all too financiering which have been practised from the beginning to the end. The removal of the office from one locality to another amounts to nothing. The public will not be satisfied with such a miserable subterfuge. The new Directors of this Company were put in for the purpose of giving the public all the facts, and they have no right now to remain silent. We understand that in the progress of their investigations they have discovered that star statements in regard to the various secret issues of stock and the frightfully exorbitant rates paid for money are strictly true.

From the New-York Herald, June 4, 1857.

It is astonishing that notwithstanding the warnings we have given, the thousand and one exposures we have made, the facts daily being revealed confirming all we have said of railroads and their management, there are people who will still allow themselves to be deceived. One would suppose that there had been experience enough to demonstrate the fact of the universal false pretenses of these gentlemen. England has lost her five hundred millions in railroads—New England one hundred millions. The Middle States are riddled with worthless lines, and the West are running roads in every point that can by any possibility be dignified with the name of village. The tendency of all is downward. * * * The most culpable parties to this monstrous and atrocious system of swindling are (were?) the organs of the bull speculators; the press that panders to these railroad loan sharks and contractors. Not only have they stood by and seen and known the vile deception practised, without raising the first note of warning to their readers, but they have to the utmost of their power constantly helped to inflate the bubble. Incessantly do they labor to make the worse appear the better reason. No argument, no circumstance that can aid the deception is spared. The same stock, whether selling at 1¾ per cent or 60 per cent, is puffed with equal zeal. * * * The Herald is the only paper in the world, with the exception of the London Times, (which has recently broken ground,) that has had the independence to battle with this great fraud. We have fought it single handed and alone from the beginning. We have never hesitated nor wavered for an instant, nor shall we ever, until the rottenness and corruption of the entire system are so thoroughly exposed that its originators are powerless for further mischief. The frowns of the magnates of Wall street have no terrors for us. We do not owe our existence to any of its stock-jobbing concerns, nor are we tenants in common in any of their back shops, prepared and bound to do their dirty work. * * * *

The stock market opened and closed without much change to-day. In Erie and MICHIGAN SOUTHERN, old deferred, there was an active movement, and in the latter, the parties most concerned, managed to work prices up a little. It opened at 55¾ and closed at 55¾ per cent. cash. Erie improved on the opening. In other stocks there was a very moderate movement at yesterdays prices. Galena and Chicago fell off 1¼ per cent. We notice a sale of Michigan Southern, old deferred, at the first board to-day, at 50 per cent., sellers twelve months. At the second board the market was weak and considerably lower for some stocks. The bears are putting out long contracts, their own option, in Michigan Southern. Sales, sellers six and twelve months, were made to-day, and there were sellers upon any terms. Michigan Central Railroad stock shows signs of weakness. It has been sustained at very low prices in a wonderful manner, and there is no doubt that it contains all the elements of depreciation, decay, and, like all the rest, it follows that sooner or later it must go in the same way. We understand that Commodore VANDERBILT feels very confident of putting the Transit Company into shape at an early day. It will be the crowning act of his long career.

Several important changes were made in the Board of Directors at the late election of the Cumberland Coal Company. The out-of-town managers were displaced and well-known City names substituted. The company will be benefited thereby. It is gratifying to learn that out of many mining companies the Cumberland still exists, retaining the confidence of its friends and pursuing a career of usefulness with profit to the shareholders. In the early formation of Coal and Mining companies, the public was led much astray by the false statements of originators. The remoteness of these properties prevented that personal examination so necessary to form a correct idea of their value. In this way FARMER VEIN, Phœnix, New Creek, Llangollen, and other Cumberland companies were introduced into this market, as equal, if not superior, to the only one now in active operation. Cumberland has outlived them all, and has been conducted in a manner to acquire for itself a growing and increasing trade.
